Smaller board is ahead for county

By PETER W. BRONSON

They didn't sing "Auld Lang Syne," but commissioners passed a milestone of sorts at their meeting Tuesday: only five knew for sure they'd still have a place on the board following a primary election Aug. 10.

The board will continue to meet as an 11-man commission until Jan. 1, 1983, but four commissioners will be "lame ducks" beginning with their next meeting Aug. 31. Two others could be replaced in the general election in November.

Two commissioners, Robert Stienman and John McNalley, both of DeWitt, will not run for re-election; two more will be eliminated when Earl Lancaster and Robert Wood, both of St. Johns, and Harold Martin of Westphalia and Walter Nobis of Fowler face-off in the Aug. 10 primary; and two more commissioners, Roger Overway of DeWitt and Richard Hawkes of Bath, will face Democratic challengers in November.

During the meeting Tuesday, commissioners discussed a variety of topics, including court administration problems, building improvements and zoning changes.

Board members tabled a proposal by Richard DePond of Ovid that could have reduced Clinton County judges' salaries. DePond urged commissioners to follow the example of Gladwin County and notify the state the county would not pay newly re-elected judges a supplemental salary of $11,735.

"If the state wants to pay the judges, let them pay them," DePond said. The Gladwin County resolution says requirements that counties pay supplemental salaries to judges in order to qualify for state reimbursement causes an "undue burden" on county revenues, and DePond apparently agreed.

But Board Chairman Roger Overway of DeWitt said the judges have not gotten supplemental payments from the county. "We already told the state that when they sent the supplemental down to us that we would not pass it on."

Earlier this year, when State Supreme Court Chief Justice Mary Coleman asked all state judges to make pay concessions, some Clinton County judges objected, saying the county's failure to pay them a supplement made them some of the lowest paid judges in the state already.

"If we do this," Overway said of DePond's motion, "It will make our judges by far the lowest paid in the state of Michigan. I don't know if we want to do that to them."

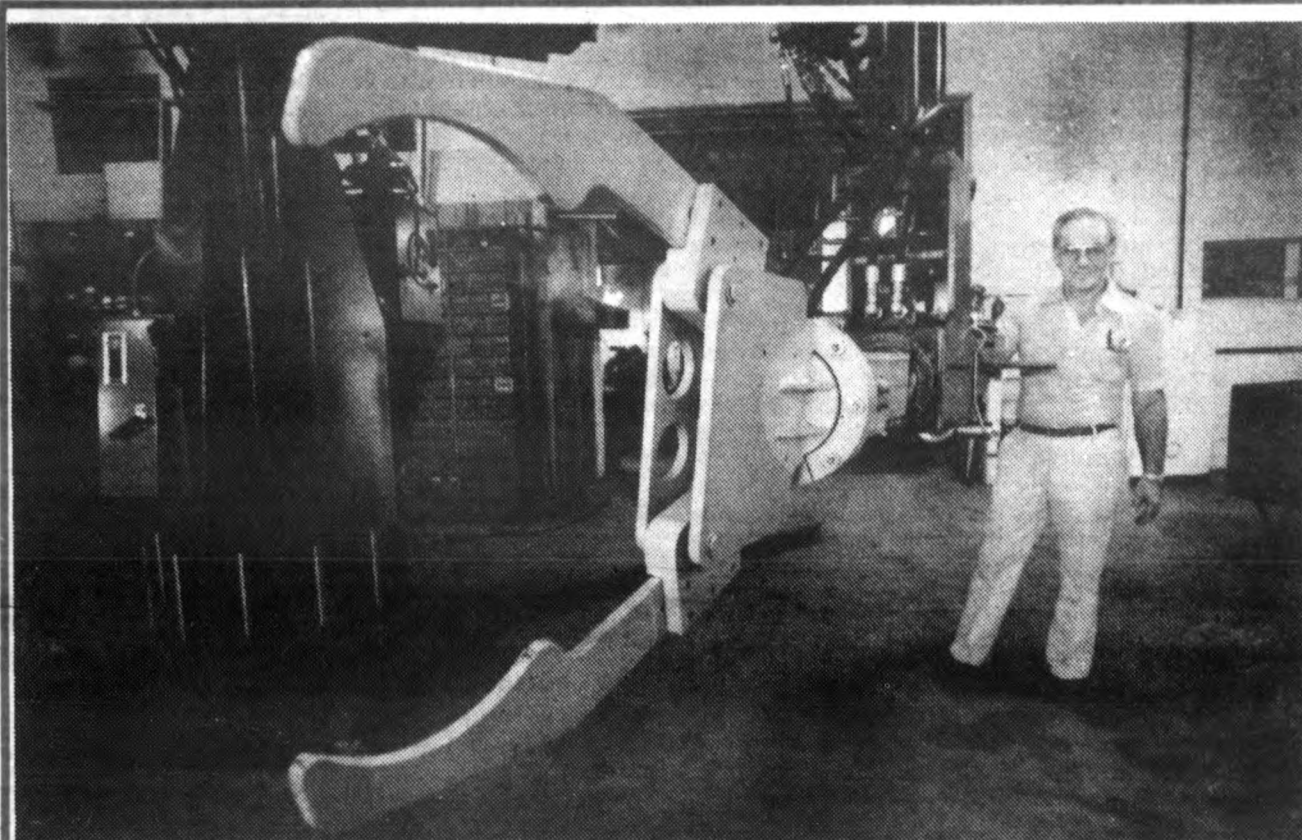

Without any supplement, judges earn about $35,000 per year, he said.

In other action, commissioners approved a special use permit for a new antenna at Searles Mobile Home Park on Parks Road in St. Johns. The 60 foot tower and dish antenna will make it possible for applicant Leon Searles to install a private cable for his residents.

Searles yanked cable service at the park after problems with Cable Vision Inc. of Mt. Pleasant last May, provoking an uproar from residents. He vowed to replace the cable with another company or his own set-up after failing to get a share of fees and installation improvements from Cable Vision.

Zoning Administrator Jack Nelson told commissioners the new antenna would not cause a hazard to flight patterns since several taller antennas surround it. "That's a moderate height compared to the 300 foot antenna nearby," he said.

Commissioners also agreed to investigate the possibility of organizing the purchase of a Jaws of Life emergency rescue tool for the Clinton County Sheriff's Department. No such tool is owned by fire departments in the northern part of the county, and Kiwanis Club members have suggested a joint purchase by local townships, the county, ambulance services and cities.

Raises granted, strike ended

By BONNIE BUBLITZ

About 75 employees of Saylor-Beall Manufacturing Co. Inc. in St. Johns returned to work Thursday, July 22, ending a month-long strike.

Saylor-Beall officials declined to comment on settlement of the strike, but John Tipton, a member of United Auto Workers (UAW) Local 925's negotiating committee, said workers had won their demand for a $1 per hour increase.

Tipton said the striking hourly employees will return for two weeks under their old contract, then will receive a $1 per hour increase, from an average of $7 to $8 per hour. The temporary contract expires in 90 days, and negotiations for a new contract will re-open in 60 days, Tipton said.

At that time, employees will seek an additional 70¢ or more per hour in fringe benefits, including hospitalization and "hopefully, a better dental plan," Tipton said.

The 36-year-old plant on Kibbee Street manufactures stationary and portable air-compressors for major oil companies and car dealerships. Production at the plant owned by majority shareholder Russel V. Allman Jr. was shut down when the St. Johns UAW local voted "overwhelmingly" to strike June 25, a union spokesman said. They claimed the company was mismanaged and said Saylor-Beall executives were overpaid.

But Jim Leon, executive vice-president of Saylor-Beall, said the company could not afford salary increases. He demanded workers accept a wage freeze and hinted the company might consider closing the plant or relocating.

Leon also denied the plant was mismanaged and said production had declined from peak years in 1978 and 1979. He offered a worker incentive plan to improve production.

It appears part of the plan may be included in negotiations for fringes, which Tipton said would be tied to production quotas.

During the strike, union officials complained that poorly managed inventories and assignments left workers idle much of the time. "The management problem wasn't really settled," Tipton said, but a production coordinator will be assigned to "try to see that the workers have the raw materials they need to keep production going," he said.

"The timing of the strike was bad," Tipton said, considering present economic conditions. "We didn't want to do it but we were forced into it."

Many workers returned to work immediately, and the rest were expected to be back on the job by Friday, July 30, Tipton said.

Five people injured in two automobile accidents

Five people were injured in two separate accidents and a Lansing woman arrested for driving under the influence of liquor were among the incidents reported by Clinton County law enforcement agencies in the past week.

Two vehicles collided at the intersection of DeWitt Road and Walker Road in St. Johns July 22, according to Clinton County Sheriff's Deputies. Both drivers did not see each other until they were in the intersection due to tall grass and the small size of the vehicle driven by Luella Canfield, deputies said. The driver of the first car, Johnny Thakthy, was taken by ambulance to Clinton Memorial Hospital, where he was treated and released for minor injuries. Two passengers in his car, Sone and Somphety Thakty, as well as Ms. Canfield, sought their own medical assistance.

A vehicle driven by Russell Patrick Howard, Grand Ledge, landed on its top after leaving the roadway, going through a ditch, striking a driveway culvert and becoming airborne, Clinton County Sheriff's Deputies said. The accident occurred at the intersection of S. Wright Road and Townsend Road in Fowler July 25. Howard said he fell asleep at the wheel, according to deputies. He received minor injuries and sought his own medical attention.

Bath Township Police arrested Delphine Palomo, 2105 Beal, Lansing, July 24 for driving under the influence of liquor. Ms. Palomo was transported to the Clinton County Jail, but the jail was full, so she was moved to the Shiawassee County Jail, police said.

A riding lawn mower valued at $500 was taken July 19 from the residence of Victor J. Clark, Eagle, according to Clinton County Sheriff's Deputies.

A toolbox full of tools valued at $200 was taken July 20 from the residence of William Bengal, 1101 Turner, DeWitt. The toolbox was taken from his garage, DeWitt City Police said.

A bicycle valued at $75 was taken July 22 from the residence of Linda Fowler, 316 N. Scott, DeWitt, DeWitt City Police said.

A specially built racing bicycle worth $700 was taken at 2:15 p.m. on July 21 from the Jack Pine Lodge, 14200 US-27, DeWitt Township, Township Police said. The BMX bike belonged to Darcy Dee Long of Owosso.

A lawn mower valued at $200 was taken sometime between July 22 and 24 from the Rotunda Trailer Park, 3730 Northeast St., DeWitt Township, Township Police said. The lawn mower belonged to the trailer park management.

Stereo equipment worth $200 was taken July 14 from an open garage at the residence of Jane Yankee, 1975 W. Park Rd., DeWitt Township, Township Police said.

A black and white television, a portable radio, a weather alert radio and a flashlight, valued at $250 total, were taken July 24 from a camper parked at the residence of Glen Cathey, 506 W. Washington, DeWitt, DeWitt City Police said.

Ten guns and ammunition for all the weapons were among the items taken July 19 from the residence of George Arthur Sargent, Cutler Road, DeWitt, according to Clinton County Sheriff's Deputies. Also taken during the breaking and entering were a microwave oven, a black and white television, a color television, a radio, a police scanner, a jewelry box with several jewelry items inside, a digital clock-radio, a filing box, gun-cleaning items, bow and arrow equipment and a hunting knife, deputies said. The items taken were valued at approximately $2,500.

Nine mailboxes were broken off in the area of Elmwood and E. Geneva in DeWitt July 25, DeWitt City Police said. There is a suspect in the case, which is currently under investigation, police said.

Candidates say plenty in two-minute slots

By PETER W. BRONSON

About 75 people, including candidates in four Clinton County contests, showed up for a Meet the Candidates Night Monday at Smith Hall in St. Johns.

Sponsored jointly by Clinton County's Farm Bureau and Cooperative Extension service, the program was introduced by Farm Bureau member Dennis Phillips and President Don Sisung, who said voters must pay increasing attention to local races since more state and federal authority is being transferred back to local hands.

Changes in the format from previous years allowed candidates in the Aug. 10 primary election just two minutes each to address any topic of their choice, a limit most candidates found too short. The brief speeches were followed by an informal face-to-face discussion and refreshments, giving the crowd a chance to ask questions.

County commission candidate Earl Lancaster led off the evening. The present representative of District Five will face District Four commissioner Robert Wood for a new District Three under the county's reapportionment plan reducing commission seats from 11 to seven. Both Republicans were present, and both said they found it hard to run against each other after years of serving together on the board, representing the east and west sides of St. Johns (the new district includes the entire city and a handful of Bingham Township residents).

"It's distressing for me to run against my good friend Bob Wood, but that's the way the ball bounces," Lancaster said.

Lancaster said a smaller county board will be more demanding on commissioners' time, something he has plenty of since he is retired.

Wood, who is not, replied with a touch of humor. "I feel quite badly having to run against Earl," he said. "It's like running against my own grandfather."

Wood emphasized future problems facing the board, including jail expansion, and discussed his philosophy of government. "The government should only do what it is qualified to do or what it has to do," he said.

Both emphasized their years of experience on the board, as did two other incumbent commission candidates present who have been forced by redistricting to square-off against fellow Republicans in the Aug. 10 primary.

Harold Martin, of District Three, and Walter Nobis, of District Two, were present to discuss their candidacy for the new District Two. Both Republicans emphasized their committee work, including a half dozen years as finance chairman for Nobis and an equal span as building and grounds chairman for Martin.

"I've been trying to get our buildings in shape and save money in the process," Martin said.

"It's going to be a real tough next ten years," Nobis said, referring to state and national economic problems.

Commissioner Glen Webster, who will be unopposed for District One, was present, but remaining commissioners, also unopposed in the primary, were not.

Next on the agenda was a field of candidates for the 89th District State Representative seat currently held by Republican Gary Randall.

Randall, elected in 1978, said he has been devoting time to welfare reform. "I'm trying to restore credibility to a system which has gotten way out of hand," he said. "Where the problem comes into the picture is where we've been exceeding the minimum wage, discouraging people from entering the work force."

Randall said Michigan is in the midst of a depression, and other candidates for his seat agreed.

Republican Raymond Pineau, who called himself the "new kid on the block" since moving to the district two years ago, said he was anti-abortion, but in favor of a 20-year-old drinking age, a cap on interest rates and workmen's compensation reform.

"I would propose a two-year tax moratorium and five-year graduated tax for any new business who would locate in Michigan and promise to stay here seven years," he said.

Alta Reed, also a Republican, proposed a platform based on a "right to life and right to workfare, not welfare."

If elected, the former Clinton County commissioner and present DeWitt Township treasurer pledged to donate $5,200 of her salary to youth programs and other charities.

Rounding out the Republican slate in the 89th District race was Virginia Zeeb, who pointed out she has already loaned 10 percent of her salary to the state during recent years as a state employee.

"Financial responsibility and financial discipline are the key to getting state government back on its feet," the former Clinton County Commissioner said. "I decided to run in the firm belief I could do a better job putting together legislation than many of the laws I had to implement as a state employee."

She said her primary concern as a legislator on behalf of Clinton County would be agriculture, roads and bridges.

Facing each other on the Democratic side of the Aug. 10 ballot are Donald Proko, a teacher and professional musician, and Phillip Stoddard, a 22-year-old Central Michigan University student.

Proko, who teaches in the Fulton School District, said the big issues are unemployment, education and agriculture. "Everyone harps about the same thing," he said. "Government must cut corners and get the fat out."

Stoddard, who emphasized aid to education, said incumbents cannot do the job for Michigan. "They'll give you the run around ... they'll snow-job you," he shouted. "It's time to clean up state government."

Also present was Jim Heppinstall, a St. Johns farmer running on the Tisch Independent ticket. Unopposed until November, he said he "would be around for a while."

"You're not going to get rid of me that easy with a primary," he said. Summing up his stand, which includes a part-time legislature, Heppinstall said: "The state of Michigan just flat out has too much money to spend."

Allen defends record, Cropsey charts new attacks

By PETER W. BRONSON

Farmers and their wives sat through brief speeches by a parade of candidates in the restless heat of Smith Hall Monday night, but when the leaders in the Republican race for the 30th Senatorial District took the podium, even the flies buzzing through the open doors lit to listen.

Incumbent Dick Allen and challenger Al Cropsey, both of DeWitt, have been trading verbal jabs of late regarding Cropsey's version of Allen's record. So Allen took advantage of his two-minute slot during the Meet the Candidates Night in St. Johns to promote his latest salvo, a pamphlet which he says sets the record straight.

"I'd like to remind you to pick up a copy of a handout in the back, The Truth About Senator Allen's record," he said as his time elapsed.

Allen said he would not belabor the troubles facing Michigan, choosing instead to stress tax-rebate programs which return about $500 million to property-taxpayers each year. "What's wrong with the State of Michigan is such a common political speech, I'm going to avoid it," he said.

But Cropsey did not. The present 88th District State Representative came armed with a large poster display which he said clearly showed what's wrong with Michigan.

As Cropsey displayed a series of brightly colored graphs, he pointed out that inflation has risen 104 percent since 1969, while increases in property taxes have been even greater. But greatest of all, he said, unfolding an overlay with a new graph, has been the 522 percent increase in welfare allocations.

"That's where your money is going," he said.

Allen, who spoke first, pointed out he had received the Farm Bureau's endorsement, but admitted he has been controversial. "As some of you know, supporting Dick Allen can be difficult," he said. "I am controversial, I have been and I will continue to be."

"I don't conduct surveys of voter opinion, I make up my own mind. I do my job 40 to 60 hours a week and I have to do this job and face myself every night. If you can look at yourself and say you've never been wrong, then you're a different kind of person than I am."

Cropsey pointed out he is backing a lawsuit to overturn the state's recent income tax increase, and told the crowd, "By the way, I'd like to point out I am the only candidate running who is a local property-taxpayer here in Clinton County." (Allen recently moved to DeWitt from Alma when district lines were changed under reapportionment.)

Another Republican, Archibald Maine, and a pair of Democrats were also present to challenge Allen.

Maine, of Livingston County, called himself the "only rebel" on the ticket. "I'm not a professional," he said, "I'm a real estate appraiser."

Democrat Patricia McAvoy of Owosso criticized "the inability of state officials to see new alternatives." She said: "The present condition of our state demands new, fresh, innovative ideas."

Complaints that she is "just a woman" do not offend her, she said. "I see it as a challenge. It's not going to be easy, but I wouldn't have it any other way."

Another Owosso Democrat, Theodore Underwood, said he preferred meeting voters up close to making a speech. "A Senator should be your listening ear instead of doing what he thinks is best," Underwood said, referring to Allen's comments.

Sidewalk Days events set to begin today

St. Johns merchants will put their goods on the street today and local shoppers, who have been taking advantage of low prices during Sidewalk Days since 1958, will have a chance to look over the wares of 31 stores and 11 non-profit organizations.

According to Jody Smith, manager of the St. Johns Area Chamber of Commerce, the sidewalk sale began 24 years ago, when downtown business owners took note of crowds in St. Johns for the 1956 Centennial and began planning the first Sidewalk Days for 1958. Bill Barber headed up the original committee, Mrs. Smith said. This year, the three-day sale, ending Saturday, July 31, was organized by Barry Dean and Bob Rehmann, co-chairmen of the Sidewalk Days committee of the chamber of commerce.

The event will include items for sale by St. Johns Jaycees and Jaycettes, church groups, professional organizations, Big Brothers and Big Sisters and other non-profit groups.

On the final day of the sale, a Country Comes to Town Farm Market will be featured on Maple Street, reports said.

Handbills on poles can be hazardous

Campaign posters and garage sale signs hanging from telephone poles may not look it, but they are dangerous.

According to Dick Grandstaff, state director-operations manager for General Telephone, most people don't realize that nails used to fasten signs increase the chances of telephone installers being injured.

General Telephone installers use their spiked "climbers" strapped to their legs to climb the poles when installing or repairing phone equipment, Grandstaff explained. If a spike hits a nail, an installer is apt to lose his footing.

Grandstaff said that's the reason General Telephone is asking people not to put signs on its poles.

and if they have, to remove the signs along with the fasteners.

The problem is magnified during the summer garage sale season, he said. The company has a policy against the posting of any type of sign on its poles.

Just charming — local girl crowned 'Miss Charm'

By BONNIE BUBLITZ

The National Miss Charm Pageant was held in Charlotte this year, and the winner of the state title and talent portion was Lisa Baxter of St. Johns, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Baxter, 2373 Grove Rd.,

Lisa Baxter

St. Johns.

According to Miss Baxter, earning a spot in a pageant takes more than just looking good in a swim suit. "I saw the write-up in the paper and wrote to them, then I filled out the forms that they sent. There were a lot of forms to fill out," she said, "but I was accepted."

The National Miss Charm Pageant was Miss Baxter's first, and it offered plenty of competition. Along with 34 other girls, she was judged in four categories: evening gowns, sports wear, talent and interview.

Her state title means Miss Baxter will be appearing in many parades and community affairs. And her award in the talent portion of the competition earned her a $50 savings bond.

A St. Johns High School student, Miss Baxter will be a senior in the fall. She sings with her church choir, and is involved with a singing group at school, "The Choralaries," a 16-person song and dance troupe that performs school and community events.

Miss Baxter hopes to compete again in the pageant. "I can compete next year in the older group," she said.

"I really enjoyed meeting new people. It's fun."

The talented singer hopes to earn a scholarship, but points out that this was only her first pageant, and entering such contests can be costly.

She estimated she spent close to $500 dollars on the Miss Charm competition, including clothes, transportation and other expenses. She raised the money needed from about 20 local sponsors, including business people, friends and her family.

All of the remaining $30,000 inventory from Dave's Discount Furniture's Going Out of Business Sale has now been moved to Ovid, to David Furniture & Bedding. This inventory will be offered to the public for a limited time before being sold to the liquidators.

Andros picked to lead Fowler

Jim Andros, former principal of Fowler High School, has been named superintendent of the Fowler School District.

Andros' contract was approved by the Fowler Board of Education Monday night, July 19. Officially named superintendent July 1, Andros will be paid about $33,000, he said.

He replaces Gary Jackson, who resigned in June to take a new job as superintendent of the Huron Area School District in New Boston, near Detroit. Jackson, who left July 1, earned a little over $35,000, Andros said.

Andros became Fowler High School principal six years ago. Before that, he was assistant principal at Waverly High School for six years, an administrator at Lansing Catholic Central and a math and physical education teacher.

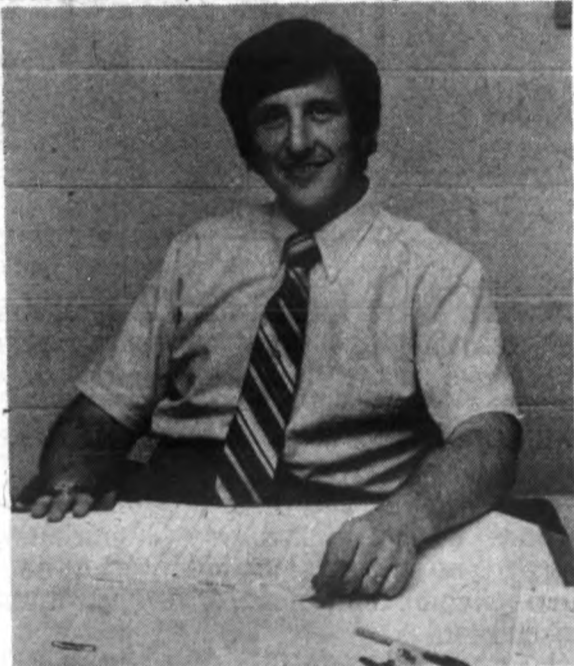

"Our immediate goal is to pass our millage request," Andros said. "Also, I would like to improve communications between the school and the community and between the superintendent and the community. Beyond that, we will have to withstand the financial crises our state is facing."

Fowler voters will be asked for 23 mills for the second time Aug. 23, Andros said. The package, defeated 255-207 at the annual school election June 14, includes 20.8 operating mills and 2.2 additional mills.

Andros said he is optimistic enough people can be convinced to vote for the measure to pass it. "We only need 49 votes," he said.

"The board and administration are only asking for enough to maintain existing programs. Without it, budget cuts would seriously hamper existing programs."

Chamber notes

By Jody Smith

News travels fast in a small town, but even if it didn't, it would be hard to keep the 12-foot giant robot at MACO Tool a secret. Plant Manager Don Smith and Plant Superintendent Bob Hawk are jointly responsible for developing the pieces of equipment for Federal Drop Forge in Lansing.

The Lansing company needed a machine to handle red-hot metal ingots. The ingots weigh about 150 pounds each and the pieces need to be handled at the rate of one every 40 seconds. The robot will be able to do just that. When Drop Forge decided to use a mechanical apparatus to lift the hot metal, their first inclination was to buy a robot and adapt it to their special needs. After checking available robots they found it would work out better to have the robot built from the ground up.

Don Smith said that planning began about three months ago with actual metal work taking about seven weeks. Don is very happy to explain how his robot works and what it can do. He says it is not technically a robot because it is not computerized and programmed. It still takes a person to operate the controls for every movement made by the machine. According to Ed Idzkowski, Co-owner of Maco, this machine makes Drop Forge more competitive in the area where this particular machine will be used. That company is able to produce the product faster and more efficiently. The machine also makes a safer workplace since the danger of injury to employees both from lifting and handling the hot metal is minimized.

The important question is, though, will the machine eventually replace workers? I can't answer that question, but I do know that competition is the name of the game in industry. If a product cannot be manufactured at a competitive price or at the pace needed, the workers will be in trouble jobwise. The idea in purchasing the $50,000 robot is to keep Drop Forge competitive in the marketplace. The machine does require a machine operator for use. The local plant management is very proud of the accomplishment. Building the machine kept Maco Tool pretty busy these past weeks so the job question is pretty hard to answer fairly however you look at it.

Maco Tool manufactures equipment that is shipped all over the world. It has sent specially built machines to Mexico, France, India and Japan as well as around Michigan and the United States. Betty Idzkowski set up a display during Michigan Week this spring which showed the link-up of industry and how it went out from St. Johns, went across the country, and came back. The company on Spring Street is an important part of a chain which connects St. Johns with the rest of the United States and foreign countries as well.

Senior citizen update

By Ruth Delo

"Know your pharmacist." That's the advice that Rex Ballantine gives. He is the pharmacist at Parr's Drug Store in Fowler. He is a young, energetic and self-assured individual who makes you feel like trusting him.

Go to the same pharmacist so that he will know what medications you are taking and if they are compatible to each other. They keep a patient profile of each person. When you give them prescriptions, they check the profile they have on you before filling it.

At Parr's they have a computer that does this, even if you have prescribed medicine from more than one doctor. If there appears to be some question about it, they will call the doctor.

Many people think that because a medicine is an "over the counter" drug, there can be no problems. Rex explains that all "so-called" drugs are adding foreign subjects to your body.

There are some side effects to all medicines, so have a little respect for what you are taking. Sometimes you are not aware of it.

Even tableted anti-acid medicine can cause side effects — such as diarrhea or constipation. Aspirin has side effects, as most of us know, such as upset stomach or stomach bleeding, but they can also interfere with prescription drugs that you are taking. Not only aspirin, but almost any kind of drug that you can buy "over the counter" can interact with prescription drugs. Ask your pharmacist or your doctor — they are more than willing to discuss it with you.

There are many generic medicines available to you. In order for a medicine to be made as a generic, it must have FDA approval. A drug must be in use for 17 years before approval is given for generic.

During this time, the original manufacturer of the drug must go through tests, research and extensive advertising. The generic medicine must contain the same ingredients as the original, but often the process of developing the pill or capsule can be very different. For instance, sometimes the medicine won't dissolve until it's almost through your system, or sometimes it will not dissolve at all and doesn't do much good as a medicine.

If you know your pharmacist, he can advise you on the use of generic drugs.

So...until next time.

Then Came Bronson

By Peter Bronson,
managing editor

Except for pollsters and psychiatrists, almost nobody really wants an honest answer when they ask "What do you think?" Most of us ask for someone else's opinion in order to start a conversation about our own.

We at the Clinton County News thought we'd give a try, however, so we held a recent get-together for anyone who wanted to drop in and offer their comments or criticism about our weekly newspaper. We really didn't know what to expect, so we laid in plenty of coffee and cookies and got permission to use the St. Johns Municipal Building Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. July 22.

We learned a lot and we hope those who attended did too. In fact, I wish more could have been there to hear their comments. For example, we heard requests for more 4-H news, more attention to smaller groups, more news about service clubs, more attention to complex issues and news from correspondents in outlying areas.

One visitor said we need to write more news about the dangerous state of Michigan's economy; another disagreed and said we already publish too much bad news. What's needed is good news, she said.

And while one gentleman said we had no right to take an editorial stand on issues or make candidate endorsements, another visitor said our editorials "had the whole town buzzing" and suggested she would like to see one every week.

Several people said they think we are spread too thin, trying to do too much with too few people. Others criticized our editing, pointing out typographical errors and misspelled words.

We were asked why we had no women's page; we were told our pictures are too large and that we should use smaller pictures to save space for more news items.

Couldn't anybody say something good about us, you ask?

Well, some did, and their comments were welcome. We got high marks for our news coverage and several said our editorials have been a welcome topic of increasing community discussion.

Where possible, we attempted to explain our goals and aims. For example, we explained that the amount of room for news each week is determined by the amount of advertising sold; that the Clinton County News directly reflects the support it receives from its community in this fashion. We said we would much rather speak editorially when we are certain than risk our credibility with snap judgements. And I think we surprised many when we told them our circulation is growing, rebounding from a brief decline and nearing its all-time high at more than 5,000.

But we were there to listen, and I hope others heard what I heard: the sound of many different and sometimes opposed opinions about what a local newspaper should be; the sound of demands, cooperation and flexibility.

Because our product is news, we are constantly changing, offering a variety of different items every week for a variety of tastes.

If you don't like what you see, stick around. Our newspaper changes every week. We promise.

THE GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATES' STAND ON THE ISSUES

County voters face several proposals

'Yes' vote could save tax money, clerk says

By PETER W. BRONSON

In addition to a field of about three dozen primary candidates, Clinton County voters will have several ballot proposals to decide on when they go to the polls Aug. 10.

All county voters will have a crack at the Property Tax Limitation Referendum, a proposal which will not increase or limit property taxes, but which could save the county some money, according to Clinton County Clerk Jane Swanchara.

If the proposal is defeated, she explained, an eight-member tax allocation board will have to meet a minimum of three times a year; and local units — township boards and school districts — boards will be required to submit detailed budgets to the county each April to receive their share of the county's millage revenue.

By the time per-diem fees, mileage and other expenses are added up, the cost to the county would be at least $3,000 each year, Mrs. Swanchara estimates.

If voters approve the proposal, however, meetings of the tax allocation board would be unnecessary. The county's 15 mills would be divided just as they always have been, and the extra expense of administering the split could be spared.

Either way, the county will continue to levy 15 mills, the same amount set according to state law in 1975. Of that, 5.80 mills will go to the county; one mill to townships; 20 mills to the intermediate school district; and eight mills to school districts.

Mrs. Swanchara stressed the proposal will not raise or lower property taxes, a misconception which she believes resulted in a similar proposal's defeat in 1980. The county millage was allocated according to the same schedule prior to that year without the aid of a tax allocation board, she pointed out. But confused with a variety of tax limitation amendments on the 1980 ballot, voters misunderstood and rejected the tax allocation proposal, she said.

"People were just saying 'no, no, no, no,' and when they came to the county proposal they said 'no' again. I honestly think that was the case," she said.

The tax limitation amendment establishes fixed allocation for the next six years, but could be changed at any election if voters petitioned to put the issue back on the ballot, she said.

One member of the current tax allocation board, Earl Barks, voted against putting the proposal on the ballot, Mrs. Swanchara said. Representing townships, Barks believes their share of the county allocation is too small, she said.

"People were just saying 'no, no, no,' and when they came to the county proposal they said 'no' again. I honestly think that was the case," County Clerk Jane Swanchara said of the proposal's defeat in 1980.

Others on the tax allocation board — including representatives from schools, the intermediate district, the county and the general public — have voiced no objection to the millage division formula, and say township budgets don't justify an increase in allocation, she said.

Also, any of the units involved can go to voters individually and seek millage increases, Mrs. Swanchara pointed out. On Aug. 10, several will do just that.

DeWitt voters will have two ballot proposals. Voters are being asked to approve a one-mill increase to fund the DeWitt Charter Township Police Department for two years. One mill will generate about $70,000 each year, according to Supervisor Leonard Pung, and will help replace part of the $100,000 cut from the township police budget a year ago.

DeWitt Township voters also can settle a zoning problem at the corner of Turner and Clark roads, where neighbors are protesting a proposed single-family housing development. The land must be rezoned from agriculture (A) to residential high density (RH) to allow development, and the issue has been put to voters at the Aug. 10 primary.

Bath Township voters also have two proposals to consider. They can vote on recall of Township Supervisor Rich Brook and will be asked to decide on a proposal for a three-year, two-mill increase to fund their township police department.

Brook has been the subject of a recall campaign by United Citizens-Unfair Taxes (UCUT) which claims, among other charges, that Brook reassessed his own property to reduce his taxes while township supervisor.

Brook says the reassessment was part of an exercise in a tax assessing class, and could result in lower tax assessments for others in the township.

If Brook is recalled, a replacement could be chosen by voters in November from a field of candidates selected by Democrats and Republicans, Mrs. Swanchara said. Brook would not be allowed to run in the election to fill his vacant seat.

Bengal Township voters will have a chance to grant renewal of a one-mill increase in the township's millage rate for two years. The money would be earmarked for the improvement and maintenance of roads and construction of bridges.

Watertown Township voters will be asked to pay one additional mill, beginning in 1983, to develop and implement a township zoning and land use ordinance.

Bath student attends seminar

A Bath High School senior will be one of only 145 students in the state invited to participate in an upcoming Michigan State University (MSU) seminar for gifted students.

Laura Nuoffer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Nuoffer of 13423 Nelson Rd., was nominated to participate in the two-week seminar by high school staffers. She will represent Clinton County at The Michigan Summer Institute for Gifted Students.

An outstanding science student, Miss Nuoffer says she's proud to attend the summer program, which is the first of its kind offered by MSU.

"Everyone's glad I get this chance and they all congratulate me," she said. "I applied at the recommendation of my science teacher. I know they offer a lot of choices and that I will be working with science, but I haven't received any definite information yet," she said.

In addition to her interest in science, Miss Nuoffer is involved in spring forensics and is a member of the newspaper staff at Bath High School. "Next year I hope to work on the newspaper again, hopefully as an editor," she says.

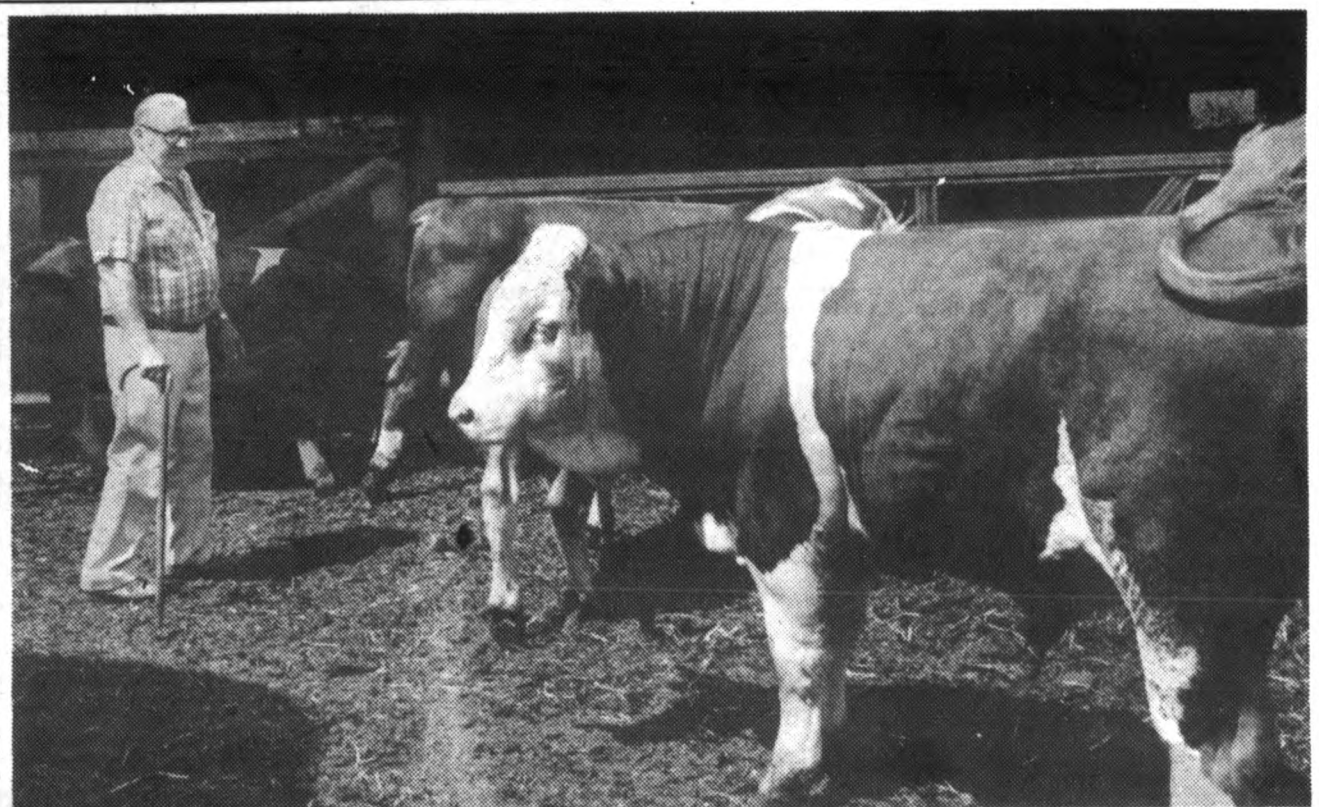

After high school, Miss Nuoffer plans to attend college, but definite plans have not yet been made, she said.

"I haven't made a positive choice yet, but I think somewhere in computer programming," she said, when asked where her interests lie.

Her two-week seminar at MSU begins Aug. 1.

Laura Nuoffer says she's not sure what the future holds for her yet, but her selection as one of only 145 Michigan students attending an MSU program for gifted students should brighten it considerably. (Photo by David Olds)

Peatee cattle are top choice at fair

By PETER W. BRONSON

Carl Peatee says he's "kinda proud" of his bulls and heifers. He should be.

Four of Peatee's pure-bred Simmental cattle left St. Johns for the Gratiot County Fair last week, and returned from the July 21 open judging with nine championships.

"I guess I'm kinda proud of that and I think it's something Clinton County can be proud of, too," Peatee said.

The West Marshall Road breeder, along with his wife, Jean, has been raising Simmental cattle for 10 years. A year ago he had the Reserve Champion Jr. Heifer at the State Fair. But with competition in Holland, Ionia and at the State Fair in Detroit still ahead this year, he expects to do even better.

"If we can get a win in Detroit, we will probably go to the nationals (judging) in Kentucky," he said. "It's been a goal we've always aimed at."

Peatee raises about 30 head of cattle, including 18 Simmental. Among them are four which were shown by Rusty Plummer of Hickory Knoll, Owosso, during the Gratiot Fair: "P.T. Mr. Smooth," a senior bull, selected Senior Champion and Grand Champion; "P.T. Black Jack," a reserve senior bull, selected Reserve Champion and Grand Champion; "P.T. Little Joe," a junior bull, selected class winner and Junior Bull Champion; and "P.T. Miss Jennifer," a senior heifer, judged Sr. Champion and Grand Champion. "Black Jack" and "Jennifer" also were named Champion Pair in pairs competition, Peatee said.

Peatee said he will probably sell the champion Simmentals if they don't go to the nationals, but his prize-winning bulls and heifers — whose price climbs with every blue ribbon — won't end up as T-bones.

"They're strictly pure-bred breeding stock, not butchering stock," he said.

Acid Rain: Scientists are still hunting answers.

Nestled in the peaceful north woods near Gaylord, Joyce Hartley's home appears to be an unlikely frontier of scientific research.

But Mrs. Hartley, and people like her throughout the eastern United States, are science's foot soldiers in an urgent effort to unravel a major environmental mystery.

The target: acid rain. The name sounds ominous. Some individuals claim that acid rain can damage lakes, forests and crops. It is, at the very least, a highly emotional issue.

But underneath the rhetoric, scientists have more questions about acid rain than answers. People like Mrs. Hartley play a vital role in the search for those answers. Using scientific equipment, Mrs. Hartley measures precipitation and collects rain and snow samples. She tests the samples for acid content, then she sends the samples to a California laboratory for more detailed analyses. Identical research is being done at other locations throughout the eastern U.S. The results will show, over time, differences and changes in rain acidity.

It is only one of many studies. The Electric Power Research Institute, the research arm of America's electric power industry, has spent more than $15 million studying acid rain. In 1981 alone the federal government spent $30 million. Despite all of the research, precious little is known about acid rain and its effects.

Acids, of course, are an essential part of our world; apples, oranges, carrots, bananas, tomatoes, and thousands of other foods are acidic. Rain, too, is naturally acidic.

What causes acid rain? Certain gases react with moisture in the air and are converted to acids. Carbon dioxide, for example—present naturally in the atmosphere—reacts this way to form a mild carbonic acid.

Sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides also react with moisture to form acids. Volcanoes, forest fires, lightning, and decaying vegetation all release sulfur or nitrogen compounds into the air. So do man's inventions, such as coal-burning industrial and electric power plants. The country's transportation system produces large amounts of nitrogen compounds. It is man's contributions which some claim are increasing the acidity of rain and threatening the environment.

But scientists aren't so sure. They haven't been able to conclusively prove adverse environmental effects. In fact, scientists have not even been able to agree whether rain is any more acidic than in the past.

Nonetheless, concerns about the environment have prompted society to take protective action. Michigan has been a national leader in reducing industrial sulfur dioxide emissions. Its air quality regulations are among the toughest in the nation.

But it is costly. Michigan's two major electric utilities have invested nearly $2.5 Billion in environmental controls in the past seven years. Michigan utilities have reduced sulfur dioxide emissions by nearly 45 percent over the past five years in order to comply with state-mandated control programs. The result has been an improved environment but higher bills for customers.

Before citizens are asked to foot the bill for additional sulfur dioxide controls, utility companies say the public deserves more answers, and proof that proposed solutions will work. That's why Michigan utilities are investing in research projects, like the one involving Joyce Hartley.

They are looking for the answers no one has yet.

Redwings look to seniors in '82

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a six-part series previewing Clinton County's high school football squads.

By BUDDY MOOREHOUSE

After many seasons of winning records, the St. Johns Redwings dropped to 4-5 last year, and head coach Joe Gonzales wasn't too happy about it. He doesn't expect it to happen again.

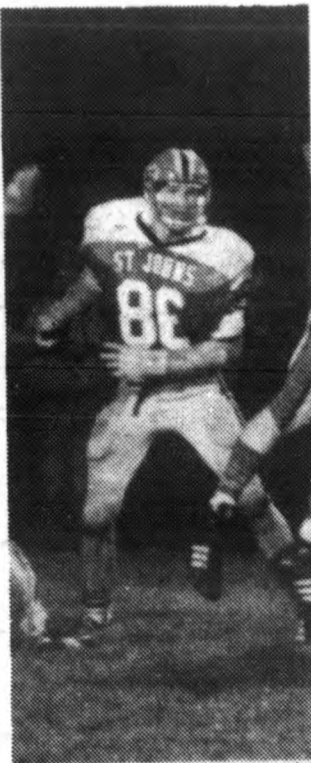

"We lost a lot of tight ballgames last year," Gonzales said. "There were three overtime games, and we lost them all. Our main problem was that we were small last year. Our guys were tough, but they were small."

This year, however, is a different story. The Redwings will be bigger — as big as anyone they play, says Gonzales — and that could mean a return to a winning season.

Leading the way for St. Johns will be a long list of seniors, several of whom have been starters since their sophomore year.

At 6-3 and 205 pounds, offensive and defensive end Tim Moore will be one of St. Johns' biggest weapons. Moore has been a three-year starter for Gonzales, and should be one of the top players in the state this year. "Tim has a real good chance of going to a major college," said Gonzales. "He goes out and plays hard all the time. He's a hitter."

Another key returnee is quarterback and safety Steve Gonzales, the coach's son. Steve also started some games as a sophomore before moving into a full-time role last year. With 4.7 speed in the forty-yard dash, Steve is one of the fastest members of the Redwing squad.

Tim Moore

In the offensive backfield, St. Johns will once again have the services of Todd Elsea at tailback and Bruce Riley at fullback. Elsea has speed to burn, while the bruising Riley will be counted on in short-yardage situations and for his blocking ability.

On the line, the Redwings will be relying on guards Sam Barnett and Steve Vandemark, tackles Eric Smith and Jamie Werbish and center Eric Thumm to help move the offense this season. At 6-1 and 230 pounds, Thumm holds the distinction of being the biggest member of the team.

St. Johns head coach Joe Gonzales (second from right in front row) hopes to get some leadership from his seniors in 1982. The seniors include (front row, left to right) Jamie

Turf is tuff when it comes to racing

By BUDDY MOOREHOUSE

Meet Emil Maynard, except don't call him Emil — no one does. His nickname is "Tuff Turf," or just "Turf" for short. Turf is a bicycle motocross (BMX) racer, and he's one of the best around. He has more than 60 trophies to prove the point.

Turf has only been racing on BMX tracks for 3½ years now, but he's already moved up to the "expert" class. He is sponsored by Denny's Schwinn in East Lansing, which gives him a free bike and pays his way to races. In short, Turf is one of the most feared racers on the BMX circuit.

Not bad for someone who just turned eight years old last month.

"It's fun," Turf says simply when explaining why he likes bike racing. "It's just fun."

Turf, who will be a third grader at St. Peter Lutheran Church in St. Johns this year, started racing bicycles at the age of four when he saw an ad on television for a race. He and his mother, Jan, threw his Stingray bike in the car and went to the race. Turf placed fifth and took home his first trophy.

That was just the start. He moved on to lighter and faster bikes, and started winning race after race. It wasn't long before he attracted the attention of the Schwinn company, which sponsors 20 teams of riders throughout the country. Turf became a member of the Denny's team as its representative in the 8-expert class.

Now, as the team's youngest member, Turf has hit the big time. The bike he rides is worth close to $1,000 — that expensive because it is made of ultra-light aluminum and titanium and weighs only 16¼ pounds. He takes it in to Denny's weekly for maintenance. ("But they never fix the spokes," he says.)

Although he does most of his racing — sometimes five times a week — at the Capital Area Supercross track in Lansing, Turf has raced in places such as the Pontiac Silverdome, Indiana and as far away as Oklahoma.

In addition to the slew of trophies he keeps on a table in his basement, Turf has also won several jackets, a clock and a stereo. He would have even more trophies, except he decided last year to race instead for points (which accumulate into prizes such as his stereo).

With all of the success he's experienced, has Turf become too big for his helmet? Not a bit.

"Turf isn't a bragging kind of kid," says Mrs. Maynard. "Most of the kids at school don't even believe he's a bike racer because he never talks about all the things he's won."

"My girlfriend believes me," Turf adds, "but the other kids don't."

The Maynards live on an 80-acre farm about six miles southeast of St. Johns, where Turf has plenty of room to practice his craft. But he says he doesn't practice that much — he gets enough of a workout during the races.

It takes Turf roughly 38 seconds to pedal his Schwinn Sting around the 1,000-foot track. Beginners do it in about a minute while the pros take about 25 seconds. More often than not, he's the first one across the finish line when he races against other eight-year-olds. In fact, Turf has gotten to the point now where he's getting too good for himself.

"He's too fast for most of the other eight-year-olds," his mother says. "A lot of the time he has to race against nine and 10-year-olds. He usually finishes second or third when he races those kids."

The sport of bicycle motocross was just conceived in the early 1970's. Like many other new crazes of the past decade (such as roller skating and skateboarding), BMX racing got its start in California. Because of this, say the Maynards, the West Coast kids are currently the best at the sport.

"But Michigan is probably the second-best state for BMX right now," Mrs. Maynard says. "There are a lot of good teams in the state."

Turf sees one advantage racers in Michigan have over California kids, who have the liberty of racing all year in the sunshine. "They aren't any good at racing in mud," he says, "because it never rains out there."

Turf, a shy young man who always wears a wide grin, rides with the number "9" on his bike. This means that he's the ninth-best racer in his class in Michigan American Bicycle Association races. His father, Don, explains that Turf would probably be much higher were it not for the fact that he's had to miss some lately.

His inactivity has been partially due to a broken finger he suffered a few weeks ago. A mishap due to the often-perilous sport of BMX racing? Nope.

"I smashed it in that door over there," Turf says, pointing to the offending door. "I get a lot of scrapes and stuff, but I've only been hurt a couple times. Once, a guy ran over me and I had tire tracks on my chest."

But he's been able to avoid serious injury, with the exception of an ankle sprain he suffered last year. "That's one thing about Turf," his mother says. "He falls down every once in a while, but he always finishes a race."

Turf has also been able to overcome the disadvantage of being deaf in one ear. It never bothers him in races, he says. "It doesn't hurt my balance or anything."

If his finger heals in time, Turf will be competing August 1 with the Denny's team at the prestigious Great Lakes National in Waterford. As a six-year-old two years ago, he won a three-foot trophy for finishing first in his division at the Great Lakes race. He still lists that as his biggest win.

With all of the fun and success Turf has enjoyed as a BMX rider, racing has become a family affair for the Maynards. Four-year-old Erika (everyone calls her "Peaches") has just started racing Big Wheels. She brought home her first ribbon two weeks ago. Twelve-year-old Earl (everyone calls him "Earl") started racing BMX bikes two years ago, and he has moved up from the "beginner" to the "novice" class.

As for Turf, his ambition is to keep racing until he is old enough to become a pro. The age limit is 14, but most pros are in the 20-25 range. When that time comes, Turf says, "I'm going to get a lot of money and get one of those Pontiacs."

"A Trans-Am," his mother explains with a laugh.

You see, a BMX rider can earn a stereo for piling up points. A Trans-Am he has to buy.

"In the past couple of years, we haven't moved the ball well," Gonzales said. "But we're bigger this year, so we should be a little better offensively."

Along with Moore, Scott Furry will be doing the pass receiving for the Redwings this season — an area in which Gonzales says the team will be improved. "I don't want to give away any secrets," said Gonzales, "but we'll probably pass a little more this season." St. Johns has traditionally thrown the ball 12 or 13 times a game, the coach said.

On defense, the line looks to be solid with Moore and Smith at the ends, Werbish at nose guard, and Thumm and Barnett manning the tackle positions. Matt Downing will also play on the line this season. Eric Slamka, who started all of last season at nose guard, will be moved to a linebacker spot this year, joining Riley.

In the defensive backfield, All-League selection Steve Gonzales will return to the safety spot, with Scott Furry at cornerback and junior Chad Munger playing monster back. Ross Pope could fit in to the other cornerback slot.

"Defense has traditionally been our strongest suit," said Gonzales. "We should be respectable again."

Helping the defense this season will be a new defensive co-ordinator, former Bath High School head coach Garry Grady. The ex-Eastern Michigan University and Miami Dolphins player is a volunteer and will join John Wilcox and Keith Haske as the Redwings' assistant coaches.

On the special teams, the Redwings are fortunate to have one of the best legs around to handle punts and kickoffs. Werbish will be taking care of those chores, and according to Gonzales, "He should be All-League — no problem."

Helping to return punts and kickoffs will be junior speedster Jeff Hayes.

In addition to his strong crop of returning seniors, Gonzales is also counting on some help from his juniors, several of whom could move into starting roles. Nose guard and fullback Steve Jakus played as a sophomore and should contribute heavily this year, said the coach. Linebacker Mike Green could move into a starting role, as could wide receiver Jeff Hackett.

Other juniors who will be expected to contribute include defensive backs John Archambault and Carl Fedewa; linemen Tom Boynton, Jeff Ely, Scott June, Tim Smith, Mark Uribe and Brandy Wells; flanker Chris Loucks; and wide receiver-kicker Brub Zamarron.

Two sophomores will also be joining the varsity squad this season, according to Gonzales. Pat Makara, a 5-10, 205-pound linebacker and offensive guard, and John Keenoy, a 6-3, 200-pound tackle, will help add size to the Redwings.

If Gonzales and his St. Johns squad are looking for a few breathers to start the season off with, they can forget it. The Redwings open their season on Sept. 10 against Owosso, a team which "We haven't played in a long time — at least not since I've been here," said Gonzales. Following that, St. Johns will host Lansing Waverly before opening the conference season against tough Corunna.

"Our first three games are going to be the toughest three games of the year," said Gonzales, not too happy about it. "Waverly is always tough, and Corunna should be the team to beat in our conference (the Mid-Michigan 'B')."

But if the Redwings can get past those three games with their hides intact, it just might mean a return to a .500-plus season.

"We'd like to win the conference this season, and we do have a legitimate chance at it," said Gonzales. "But the main thing is that our kids go out there and have a good time playing football."

Cards toppled

"Well, we had a real good first quarter," Bath Cardinal defensive end Dan Doneth said about his team's July 24 game against the Lansing Crusaders. "We were tied 0-0."

Unfortunately for the Cardinals, however, there were three more quarters to be played. Arch-rival Lansing poured on the points to hand Bath a 63-0 drubbing, dropping the Cardinals to 0-6 in Michigan Charity Football League play.

Some streets in St. Johns will be getting new curbs

By BUDDY MOOREHOUSE

Several streets in St. Johns will soon be sporting new curbs, as the St. Johns City Commission voted at its meeting July 26 to spend $5,000 fixing up problem curbs throughout the city.

The commission had budgeted $5,000 for the curb repair, but the lowest bidder, B.B.R. Progressive Concrete, Inc. of Grand Ledge, was awarded the contract with a bid of $4,080. The commission then decided to add the additional $920 left in the budget for additional repairs.

"I'm sure they'll come across some more places that will need repair once they start," said Commissioner John Hannah.

The repairs, which will be made on scattered curbs throughout the city, will begin in a couple weeks, according to City Clerk Richard Coletta. "There might be 20 feet here or 20 feet there that needs work," said Coletta. "We just want to get all of the problem spots." The commission indicated that it hopes the curb repair project will become an annual summer event.

B.B.R. Progressive Concrete, Inc. outbid a St. Johns firm, Searles Construction, Inc., which came in with a bid of $4,335. They were the only two companies bidding.

The commission also voted to approve a proposed building addition by Sealed Power Corporation. Sealed Power had requested the permit to build an 80' by 150' addition to the north side of its existing plant. The space will be used primarily for waste storage, according to a representative of the company who was at the meeting.

In old business, the commission issued an ultimatum to the Oddfellows, giving them until Aug. 9 to bring the Oddfellows Building up to date before condemnation proceedings will begin. The commission had requested that a member of the Oddfellows attend its meeting, but none showed up.

The work that needs to be done on the building concerns the north wall, where bricks are broken or missing and cracks need to be filled in. "As far as I know, they haven't done any work since our last meeting," said Mayor John Arehart.

In other business, the commission:

- Authorized payment of $45,187 to Westphalia Builders & Supply for the maintenance building at the wastewater treatment plant.

- Authorized a partial payment of $11,375.10 to Barnhart and Sons, Inc. for work on the Morton Street sewer replacement. The payment covers all work except placement of asphalt and a 10 percent retainage on the balance of the work.

- Granted a liquor license transfer at the Roadhouse Inn, Inc. from James and Rosemarie Nuser of St. Johns to Charles and Judith Minner of Grand Ledge.

- Elected Commissioner Thomas Wiseman as St. Johns' voting delegate to the Michigan Municipal League. City Manager Randy Humphrey was chosen as the alternate.

- Agreed to begin taking bids for the purchase of two three-quarter ton pickups for the Department of Public Works. The commission has budgeted $18,000 for the purchase.

- Agreed to let the St. Johns Summer Toybox Players perform "Winnie the Pooh" Aug. 20 at the City Park bandshell. The group is led by Kristan Tetens, a St.

Johns High School graduate who is currently a sophomore at Michigan State University. "I think this is a highly commendable project," said Arehart.

- Agreed to let the St. Johns High School freshmen cheerleaders use the City Police parking lot for a car wash July 30.

- Gave permission to the Chamber of Commerce to hold Sidewalk Days July 29-31 in downtown St. Johns.

Ovid Public Library News
By ROSEMARY GOEBEL, librarian

July 27 marks the final day of the Summer Reading Program at Ovid Public Library, in which 132 local boys and girls have been "Diving for Knowledge."

Participants were assisted by 18 volunteers, librarians and Chairperson Barbara Bolton, who has reminded the readers to come to the library July 27 to pick up their certificates, divers and surprises.

The fiscal year of the library ended June 30. Librarian Rosemary Goebel counted the year's book circulation and reported that, thanks to readers of the Village of Ovid, Ovid and Middlebury Townships, reading is up. In the past year, 24,605 books were circulated, an increase of 4,000 from the previous year.

Ovid Public Library now owns a new Video Cassette Player for use by patrons who live in the library service area. Thirteen films are available now at the library and may be reserved from Lansing and Jackson public libraries beginning in September.

A deposit of $10 per use plus a service charge of $1 is required when borrowing a video cassette player. There is no charge for films. Patrons may call the library (834-5800) for more information, and catalogues of films and request forms are available at the library.

News from your group

David and Cheryl Livingston and their children were recent hosts to decedents of Horatio Nelson Keys and Althea Beebe Keys of Holley, New York. Several decades ago, they chose July 4 for re-uniting those families who reside in Michigan.

The annual reunions have been held in quiet rural areas for many years, with picnicing in the woods of the Keys' farms in Greenbush Township near St. Johns, and from time to time in homes of relatives.

This year they were welcomed by the Livingstons in their beautiful spacious home on Glengarry Drive, Birmingham. Their swimming pool, tennis court, volley ball set and trampoline were enjoyed by young and old alike.

A chicken dinner and supper were served at tables placed among the fantastic coloring of the flower beds and shrubs on one of the most perfect of holidays.

Following supper, all were treated to a slide show of previous reunions which were accumulated by the late Dr. Bion L. Bates over the past 40 years. Many were shown by Alden Livingston of St. Johns, who is now taking over the picture-taking responsibilities.

Special guests were cousins John Q. Pierce III, a retired Lawyer from Arlington, Va., who formerly lived in Elsie during his earlier years, his daughter Daren Pierce and grand-daughter, Jessica, who spent the weekend with Mrs. Adele Livingston Jones on French Road in the home where J.Q. ## Dog days rough on pets local veterinarian says

By Steven R. Thimmig, DVM

Your pet doesn't what month it is, but the recent change of seasons has brought along special pet health problems.

"Summer means additional exposure to fleas and ticks, the threat of canine heartworm disease and parvovirus infection, and the possibility of heatstroke, just to name a few problems," Dr. Robert Malesky of St. Johns Animal Clinic says.

On extremely hot days, heatstroke can quickly kill pets when they are left in a poorly ventilated house or enclosure. "Cutting back exercise and providing constant access to shade and water will keep pets comfortable," Malesky says.

Good grooming practices including baths, frequent combing and brushing also helps keep pets cool and alleviates itching.

Because pets are in frequent contact with other animals during the summer, Malesky emphasized the importance of vaccinations against distemper, rabies and canine parvovirus and a preventive program for heartworm disease.

Pet owners should be equally aware of toxic fertilizers, pesticides and herbicides that can be dangerous to an animal's skin and eyes, he said.

On the third day, relatives from Virginia came to Elsie where their cousin, Sid Keys, drove them on a sight-seeing tour of the village and made stops to reminisce with Murry Cole, Bill Knight and Gladys Vincent before leaving in the afternoon. The family had many pleasant memories of the long weekend, and pictures to accompany them back home.

Middlebury news

A successful Vacation Church School was concluded at the Middlebury United Church on June 25 with a sharing program for parents and friends followed by a fellowship hour and refreshments. A total of 72 children registered with an average daily attendance of 54. Over 90 parents and friends were guests of the Middlebury UMW for a picnic dinner. Teachers and helpers included Barb Nixon, Kay Boggs, Sheril Billings, Charlene Austin and Shelley Doyle in the nursery and kindergarten; Nancy Watkins and Bonnie

Wood in storytelling; Bonnie and her cousin, Debbie Deming, in handcraft; Hazel Beardslee, Marcia Murphy and Thora Austin for the junior high; and Rev. Mike Pearson and Betty George for the senior high. Dorothy Jordan helped in many ways by being a driver and substituting as a teacher several times. Kay Boggs and Loreta Warren were directors and Loreta was in charge of attendance and the kitchen. An offering was taken each day and will be sent to the World Hunger Fund after expenses are paid.

The Middlebury UMW hosted a picnic on the church lawn for the Vacation Bible School students and their parents and friends on June 22 with over 90 people present. Following that, the United Methodist Women held a brief meeting with Vice President Thora Austin presiding. Routine reports were read and accepted. There was a discussion of the work done at the parsonage in preparation for the new pastor, Rev. Mike Pearson, and his wife. It was voted to reimburse the Beardslees for the wallpaper and labor as soon as the bill is presented. A reception for the new pastor will be aranged after his wife returns home from China, where she has been a student on a scholarship. In the meantime, a box has been placed in the back of the church for donations of staples for setting up their new home. A short report on the farewell party for Pastor David and the progress of Bible School was made by Loreta Warren. Plans are underway for the fall Bazaar. Rug rags are being sewn and we will aim for about 25 rugs. Workshops for this will begin early in the fall. A discussion of money-making projects was tabled. Round-robin cards were signed for several people who are ill. The meeting was adjourned.
