Notes Principals

ST. JOHNS Bette Munger will be the principal of Riley and East Olive elementary schools next year; John Arehart will be the principal of Perrin-Palmer and Swegles elementaries; and Roger Feeman will be the principal of East Essex and Eureka. Superintendent Earl Gabriel reported the assignments at a June 16 Board of Education meeting.

Ham radio

MASON A number of Clinton County Ham radio operators will participate in the Central Michigan Amateur Radio Club annual emergency preparedness meeting on June 28 and 29 at the Kiwanis Campground four miles east of Mason on M-36.

The public event gives amateur operators a chance to practice skills under conditions resembling an actual disaster situation.

Gospel

ST. JOHNS The date of the Evangelistic Reach Out 8th annual gospel music concert at the band shell in the St. Johns City Park has been changed.

The new date is July 3. Open to all amateur talent, the event will begin with a picnic at 1:30 p.m. — bring a dish to pass and table service. From 4 p.m. until the fireworks begin, the gospel concert will be held.

Besides amateur talent the concert will feature the Majestics, Victory Way Singers, Nancy McKnight, Brenda Thompson and more. An offering will be taken.

Call 862-5635 or 682-4143 for more information.

Lockup!

ST. JOHNS This is it — the great event is here.

On June 24, 25 and 26 the American Cancer Society and the St. Johns Jaycees are sponsoring the Great American Lockup at the Southpoint Mall to raise many, much-needed dollars for cancer research and patient services.

For a $25 donation, persons can jail their spouse, boss, friends or enemies. Once in jail, they will be able to phone friends or relatives to raise their bail with donations going to the American Cancer Society. The goal is to raise $5,000.

Those interested in jailing someone may call 224-9551.

No college

ST. JOHNS The St. Johns Community Education Kid's College has been cancelled.

Community Education Director John Furry said enrollments for the summer enrichment program were below what was necessary to support the program. All Community Education enrichment programs are self-supporting.

Additionally, the man hired to supervise the program resigned to take a full time job, Furry said.

"It was a combination of both things, but most importantly the lack of enrollments," he said.

He said Community Education would sponsor the program again next year.

School board OKs asbestos removal

By RICH WERTZ
Editor

The last significant quantity of asbestos-containing material will be removed from St. Johns school buildings this summer following acceptance of a bid for the work by the Board of Education on June 16.

Asbestos, a fire retardant once commonly used in construction, has in recent years been found to be a carcinogen. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regulates the material's removal or "encapsulation" — meaning the material is covered over and sealed with a non-harmful material.

The St. Johns school district several months joined with other school districts in a class action suit aimed at recovering the cost of asbestos removal and encapsulation.

THE BOARD, six members of which were participating in the first meeting of their new terms, accepted a $6,850 bid by Trust Thermal Systems, a company headquartered in Eagle, for removal and replacement of ceiling material containing asbestos in the high school cafeteria and library.

A second project — the $2,500 to $3,000 cost of which does not require board approval — will be directed toward removing asbestos from tunnels beneath Perrin-Palmer Elementary. Trust Thermal Systems will also conduct that removal.

The school district will pay an additional $3,500 to $4,000 to a different company to monitor the presence of asbestos in the air while the material is being removed from the high school.

Four companies submitted bids for the high school project by the June 16 meeting. The bids varied widely — from a high bid of $42,800 to a low bid of $6,508. Maintenance Supervisor Robert Keisel said the high bid included the cost of another project previously let for bid by the school district. When those figures were separated out, the bid for the high school ceiling project alone became $23,495, he said.

A-1 Disposal Corp. submitted a $22,101 bid for the project. Keisel said the latter two bids were high because both companies would have had separate set-up and tear-down operations for the two separate stages of the work — once for the removal of the material and once to replace it. Trust Thermal Systems will set up and tear down only once and its workers will sleep on-site, Keisel said.

A $6,508 BID, submitted by Asbestos Abatement, Inc., was rejected in favor of the second lowest bid by Trust Thermal Systems. Keisel said Asbestos Abatement, Inc. deviated from the bid specifications by proposing an alternate replacement material.

Trust Thermal Systems is one of the few contractors in the state qualified to apply the replacement ceiling material specified by the school, said Keisel.

The total cost to the district for the work at the high school and at Perrin-Palmer, including the air monitoring, will be about $13,350.

Some work remains to be done at Teresa Merrill School, Keisel said, which will be performed this summer by the school district's maintenance department.

Also at the June 16 meeting: The board accepted without discussion a report from the Citizen Committee on School Organization regarding Central School. The board will begin discussion of the report on June 23.

The board tabled a resolution authorizing lawyers for the school district to file a claim for possible underfunding of mandated lunch program costs. The board asked administrators for data about how much the district can claim in underfunding. Earlier this year the district filed a similar claim for possible underfunding of mandated special education programs.

The board unanimously approved an agreement by which the school district will participate in a project aimed at infusing economic education curriculum into all grade levels of the district. The project is funded by a three-year grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

The board unanimously authorized a $94.10 payment to the Michigan Association of School Boards for membership in the organization's legal trust fund.

The board adopted a resolution that allows school employees to participate in a State of Michigan retirement plan at no additional cost to the school district.

Learning disabled can learn with extra effort

By RICH WERTZ
Editor

Bill Phillips, special education supervisor for the Clinton Intermediate School District, recalls one case in which a hockey coach was baffled by the behavior of a young man on his team.

The coach, explaining a play to his team, would tell the young man to turn right. The young man would always turn left.

The coach was at a loss for what to do and the young man seemed to have no future in hockey. Then, during a conference with the young man's parents, it was revealed that the young man had a learning disability and could not always process the concept of left and right when he was given the information verbally.

The solution was easy: the coach physically pointed to the right when he explained the play. With the visual aid of a pointed hand, the young man could and did perform the play and became one of the most valuable players on the team.

"Once he started pointing, the kid was okay," said Phillips. "Before he started doing that, he suspected the kid was slow, if not retarded."

Learning disabilities are not always recognized for what they are. The behavior of people with learning disabilities can be mistaken for lack of effort, bad attitude or rebelliousness. "The kid just sits there," "He does just the opposite of what I say," "He's got a bad attitude," are some common perceptions.

Over time, those perception can take a harsh toll on the learning disabled — their self-image can begin to match the way others perceive them.

"Confusion leads to frustration, anger, all of that," said Phillips.

Phillips can cite studies showing a striking relationship between learning disabilities and juvenile delinquency. One study by the American Bar Association said 75 percent of all juvenile delinquents are learning disabled.

Learning disabilities can take several forms but basically involve an inability to process certain type of information. All human beings have a number of different "systems" for processing information of various sorts — visual systems, verbal systems, and so on.

For people with learning disabilities, processing information that seems clear to others can become hopelessly confusing — "Especially," said Phillips, "if the presentation is made on their weakest system."

Once identified, learning disabilities can be dealt with by teaching "compensating skills," said Phillips. In the case of the hockey player, who had trouble learning from verbal presentations of information, the solution was a visual cue to supplement verbal instruction.

In another case, an added verbal presentation might be required for someone who had trouble with visual presentations. For instance, a student who can not pass a written exam might do very well when the same test is presented on a tape recorder.

Dispatching has improved say some who complained

By RICH WERTZ
and MARILYN HESS

County dispatching service has improved in recent weeks, say two township officials who were most vocal in their complaints.

That improvement follows complaints to county commissioners by Bath Township Supervisor Richard Brook and others last month that county dispatchers were not doing an adequate job of getting emergency personnel to the scene.

"Our dispatching is a little better," said Bath Fire Chief Bud Rounds. "They're answering me now. If corrections have been made, things look good so far."

"I think they're trying harder," said Bath Police Chief Gene Reno. Clinton County Jail Administrator George Weber confirms that the department is making an effort to improve dispatching, although neither Weber nor Sheriff Terry Haneckow ever conceded that the problems were as pervasive or serious as the township officials had said.

He said the department is "emphasizing" guidelines for dispatchers in response to the complaints.

"They're actually guidelines that we've used before," said Weber, who supervises the dispatchers. "The guidelines are being emphasized."

County Commission Chairman Roger Overway said he met to discuss the issue with Sheriff Terry Haneckow, County Prosecutor Jon Newman and County Emergency Services Coordinator Robert Ferry.

Overway said what came out of the meeting was an agreement to work together.

Weber said that in the future he will probably initiate further communication with other emergency services officials.

"After we feel (dispatchers) are using it the way we want them to, then maybe we'll go down to the fire departments and other departments and see if they're better satisfied," he said. "Then I'm going to say 'Now here's some things we'd like you to do.'"

Ferry had said at the county commission meeting last month — the same meeting at which the dispatching complaints were made — that Haneckow had prohibited him from entering the county communications center. Ferry and Overway had expressed concern at that time that the official in charge of communications in the event of an emergency did not have access to the communications center.

Haneckow, asked last month to comment on that concern, said that Ferry is welcome to enter the building any time he is on official business.

Overway said the same point was established at the meeting attended by himself and the other three officials.

"If it's official business, he's welcome to come in," Overway said.

What you do helps to make the difference

Jail Administrator George Weber, who supervises dispatching services for the Clinton Sheriff's Department, says dispatchers can get help more quickly to the scene of an emergency if they are given essential information by callers.

"People can get panicky and unclear when they are under emergency situations," he says.

Dispatchers are used to that and do everything they can to get essential information from callers, Weber says. But occasionally callers will be so upset that they will blurt out the fact that there is an emergency and then hang up without providing essential information.

For instance, Weber says, fires are often reported by neighbors of the victims. If the caller gives only his or her own address and then hangs up, dispatchers can not communicate to firefighters the exact scene of the fire.

In short, the information dispatchers pass on to those on the "front line" will only be as good as the information they receive.

Weber, making a comparison to school fire drills, suggests that being prepared for an emergency can help ensure that the proper emergency personnel are sent promptly to the right place. Just as schools benefit from practicing procedures for exiting a building in the event of a fire, the public could benefit from practicing calls for emergency help.

The most important thing a caller should do, says Weber, is communicate the following essential information:

• State the nature of the problem as briefly but as completely as possible. If there is a fire, are there people in the house? If there is a shooting, is it possible the gunman is still in the house?

• State in as much detail as possible the location of the emergency. This means the exact address of the emergency — not the address from which the call is made. If the location does not have a numbered address or if you don't know what it is, state the

In the House of Representatives Drunk drivers

Gary Randall

Republican lawmakers have ordered an investigation by Michigan's auditor general to determine whether the state's courts are promptly reporting drunk driving and other traffic offenses to the secretary of state's office as required by law.

A resolution (HCR 793), recently approved by the legislature, directs the auditor general to examine court record keeping and communication of violations. The findings will then be reported to the legislature.

Courts are responsible for informing the secretary of state of drunk driving offenses. If they are not passing on this information, a person could be stopped on a subsequent drunk driving violation and police agencies around the state would not have ready access to the details of that individual's driving record.

Under law, circuit and district courts are required to report drunk driving and other violations convictions immediately to the secretary of state's office so penalty points or license suspension can be assessed.

It would be possible for an individual convicted of drunk driving to be operating a vehicle when, by all rights, the license should be suspended. If the state does not know about this conviction, it cannot take action to suspend the driver's license.

The resolution received quick action by the Legislature and was supported by Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

The state's auditor general's office employs 130 auditors and accountants. It will have the responsibility of conducting the research. Although no timetable has been set for the report, a supervisor has been assigned and auditors are working fulltime on the project. I voted for this investigation because it will send a clear message to the courts that the legislature is serious about the need to keep drunk drivers off the road.

Gary Randall is the 89th district representative to the Michigan House of Representatives.

Comparison

Rich Wertz

Sometimes distance can lend perspective.

We had set out a little after sunrise from where my friend has his sailboat docked at Sarnia, Ontario. Oh, it was glorious, with a cool breeze wafting across the channel as we motored out of the harbor, passing under the Blue Water Bridge into Lake Huron.

That's where the trouble started. See, thus far we had been running on the auxiliary diesel engine. Out on the lake, the theory goes, one sails. Problem one: there was no wind. Not so much as a puff. Not a trace. Not a hint. The surface of the lake was like glass. Nothing moved. Nothing stirred.

And it was getting hot. Into that stillness heat waves began to descend. Shimmering, roasting, skin-reddening — heat.

To sit there and bake was intolerable so we decided to run on diesel a little longer. We were headed to Goderich, about 60 miles up the coast, and our course would take us far out onto the lake. Sooner or later, we figured, at least a little bit of wind would come up.

Three hours later there was still no wind. I noticed a fly circling around my head and absent-mindedly swatted at it. A few minutes later there were several more flies and they were getting annoying.

Soon, my friends and I were engaged in hand-to-hand combat with a swirling cloud of at least 52 thousand kamakaze flies. Before long the human beings on the boat were half crazy with sweat, exhaustion and frustration while the flies were having a field day and calling all the friends and relatives join them.

NO MATTER HOW many flies we killed their numbers doubled by the minute. Flies, flies, flies. Flies in your hair. Flies on your arms. Flies on your ankles. Flies on your apple after just one bite.

Not being completely witless, we suspended our efforts of extermination and began praying with renewed energy for wind.

In the meantime we shared the boat with 52 million flies, except that every now and then my friend Rick would jump up with a wild look in his eyes and begin swinging a tee-shirt over his head, while screaming, "Get out of here you psychotic little horrors! Get off my boat!"

It did no good. It was an ugly bug ball. The flies were joined by moths, beetles, things that looked suspiciously like mosquitoes but which happily did not bite like mosquitoes, every manner of strange insect you can imagine, and one ladybug. I like ladybugs and tried to befriend it but it flew away — the only one of our guests to leave voluntarily.

We motored like this for 60 miles. At Goderich, we turned around to make for Grand Bend, where we planned to harbour for the night.

Hardly had we turned around then a strong breeze came up. Immediately, 52 trillion insects vanished. Blew away to a distant horizon. Gone at last. It was wonderful.

Also, after nine hours of blazing heat, that cool breeze was like a tall cold glass of water, and we stood up and drank it in.

OUR RELIEF WAS to be short lived. We arrived at Grand Bend.

I had been on a boat for 13 hours and had during a good portion of those hours shared my living space with what I imagined to be every manner of wildlife. But I had seen nothing yet.

Grand Bend, my friends, was a zoo. All manner of strange jungle cries could be heard cutting through the night air while bands of creatures prowled the night.

"ARGUHUH, BEER!" was the most commonly heard cry. This was closely followed by "ARGUHUH, BABY!"

The main street seethed with these creatures. Some were in cars. The cars did not actually go anyplace. The cars just made noise. The cars made a lot of noise. Every now and then one of the cars would try to pull a u-turn but since the traffic formed a solid gridlock all that would happen is that the car would end up crosswise in the middle of the street. No one seemed to notice. Everyone just gunned their engines and sat in one place.

Meanwhile the sidewalks swarmed with young people who had had a lot to drink. Here was a long line of people waiting to get into a bar. Here was another. And another. There was someone who had apparently succeeded in getting through one of those lines: he sat sprawled beneath a tree holding his head.

I'm no prude, myself. Maybe, in fact, I have turned into an old fogey. But I did not like this town. It seemed to me that despite all the noise, the lights, the swarms of people — it seemed to me, I say, that there was nothing going on.

I could have dismissed the place as simply not to my taste except for what happened next — this cast that town in a light that went beyond bad taste.

My friends and I ducked into a Chinese restaurant, one of the few places on the street that was not already filled past capacity. While sitting there I observed two elderly Chinese women trying to keep up with their orders while at the same time directing a steady stream of people who came in off the streets to use the restrooms and who then returned to the street.

One young woman burst through the door with a bottle of beer in her hands. One of the harassed waitresses said politely, "I'm sorry, but you can't come in here with that. Please leave."

The young said with exaggerated indignance, "Well, all right then, but you don't have to get so oriental with me."

I was embarrassed even to watch what I took to be one young fool making herself look small. A second later I wanted to leave that town and never return — the whole place burst out into catcalls and chortles directed at the elderly waitress — as though she had gotten what she deserved.

Maybe it was only because I was tired and sunburned and not inclined toward tolerance at the moment but I decided then and there that Grand Bend was not a nice place to live. It certainly wasn't a nice place to visit.

The next morning, heading due west under full sail before a strong wind, Grand Bend receded into the distance. I made some comparisons and some judgements. And if anybody from Grand Bend, Ontario, reads this and is angered I'll apologize in advance but I can't help but thinking that that was one rotten town.

No place is perfect. But after that experience I figured returning to St. Johns would be like, after a day of motionless hot air, a cool breeze.

This year's 50th anniversary of Dairy Month

To the Editor:

This year we are celebrating the 50th anniversary of June Dairy Month.

For the past half-century, we have set aside the month of June as a time to recognize the many services to our nation performed by dairy farm families and the dairy industry. June is a time to pause to celebrate their commitment to the highest quality, most nutritious dairy products in the world.

In recognition of Dairy Month, dairy farmers and industry leaders are conducting educational campaigns, holding ice cream socials, sponsoring fitness events, conducting farm tours and engaging in many other ac-

In celebration of the Lodge's 75th anniversary, special tribute was paid to all those who have been named Mother or Father of the Year since the program began in 1964. A candle lighting ceremony was held in memory of all the deceased mothers and fathers and in honor of all the living mothers and fathers of Lodge 225. Anmarie Bradley, great-granddaughter of the first Mother of the Year, and Joey Smolka, great-grandson of the first Father of the Year, lit the special candles. Brother Bradley recited the names of all the Mothers and Fathers of the Year since 1964. Those present were escorted to the front and received a special ribbon from Sisters Doubrava and Wassa. Anmarie Bradley and Joey Smolka placed a flower in a vase each time the name of a deceased member was announced. The 1985 Mother and Father, Mamie Skaryd and Eddy Fornusek Sr. were seated on the stage where they were presented with special plaques as a remembrance of their honor.

Fruit cocktail as we know it, is a bright blending of bite-sized pieces of delicious cling peaches, pears, pineapple, seedless grapes and maraschino cherries... all in one can.

In the early 1900's long after the peach canning industry had a lasting foothold in the rich California earth, and California had started its climb as an agricultural state, fruit cocktail came into being.

In those early days when fruits were not so abundant as they are today, it became a sensible way to utilize fruits of good quality, but irregular shape, that would not meet the rigid standards for canning as whole pieces.

There is a Standard of Identity for fruit cocktail. In order for a canned mixed fruit to be labeled "Fruit Cocktail," it must contain the following fruit: cling peaches, pears, pineapple, grapes and maraschino cherries.

The contents of each can are so regulated by industry standards that the buyer is always sure of getting the proper proportion of each of the five fruits.

Out of the can, fresh fruits and vegetables are alive and blooming at Beck's everyday of the year. Improved varieties, more efficient methods of production and advanced techniques of packaging, pre-cooling, shipping, storing and displaying of fruits and vegetables can be credited to growers, shippers, distributors and grocers like ourselves, to provide this year-round abundance.

Drain assessment coming up Dec.

By RICH WERTZ
 Editor

The cost of paying off part of the debt of an abandoned flood control project in the Maple River Drainage District will be assessed back to residents and others in the district.

Farmers who own land in the drainage district, which is located in the east and northeast sections of the county, can expect to pay a one-time assessment of from 50 cents to $2 per acre and town property owners can expect to pay about $5 per lot, said Clinton County Drain Commissioner Arden Pierson.

He said the one-time assessment will show up on December tax bills.

The assessment will pay off Clinton County's share of a $625,000 debt incurred by the Maple River Drainage District for a project intended to control flooding. The district includes portions of Gratiot, Shiawassee and Clinton Counties.

In Clinton County, the district includes portions of Bingham, Duplain, Essex, Greenbush, Ovid and Victor townships and portions of the villages of Ovid and Elsie.

Clinton County will pay 27.5 percent of the $625,000 debt, or about $171,875, Pierson said.

Pierson said the project was abandoned at the request of municipalities and some of the residents of the district on the grounds that it had become too expensive.

The original plan for the district involved 90 percent federal funding. That plan was later dropped in favor of a conventional drainage improvement plan.

Pierson said factors contributing to the abandonment of the project completely included the economic climate in general, a debt load that became too great, the loss of farm land if the project was completed, and low commodity prices for farmers.

"I think if it was a massive project it could have pushed some of them over the edge," Pierson said of farmers in the drainage district.

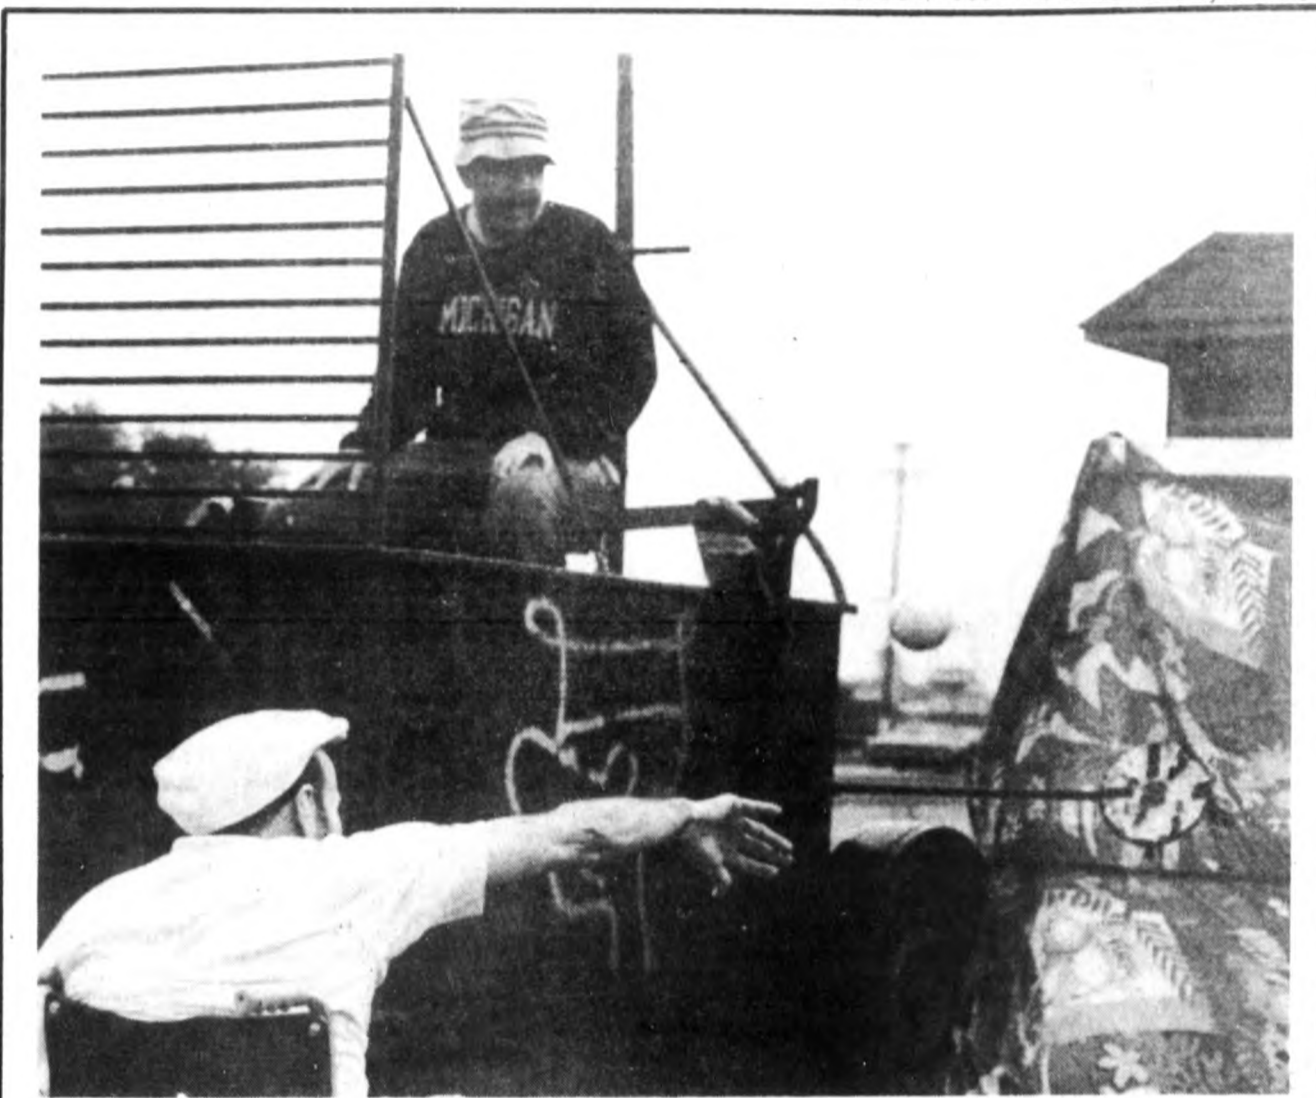

The drainage district board, faced with defaulted loans and a scheduled sheriff's foreclosure sale of mortgaged land owned by the district, and unable to borrow money because of litigation over the project, asked county commissioners in the three counties to authorize a one-time assessment to pay off the debt.

"It was absolutely critical that those debts be paid off to maintain the financial integrity of the drainage district," said Pierson.

Also paying an assessment to pay off the debt will be the townships at large, the counties at large, the Michigan Department of Transportation and the Grand Trunk Railroad.

"I think that after this is all settled we all agree that this is not the best thing that could have happened," said Pierson. "But it is the best thing we can do today."

Sturgis St. gets sidewalk

Homeowners and businesses along Sturgis Street in St. Johns will see the construction of a sidewalk along their street this summer — at no cost to themselves.

St. Johns city commissioners approved June 9 the construction of the sidewalk on the south side of Sturgis Street from Lansing Street to US-27.

The city will provide the design, supervision and materials. The Neighborhood Youth Corps, a summer youth employment program run by the Clinton Intermediate School District, will provide the labor for the project.

That plan will allow the sidewalk to be constructed with no special assessment or cost to property owners, said City Clerk Richard Coletta.

Also at the June 9 meeting, city commissioners referred to City Engineer Doug Weir a request to pave a section of North Scott Road. The owners of the Camelot Apartments wrote to the city inquiring about the procedure for paving the road from M-21 to the apartment complex.

Weir will provide an estimate of the cost of such a project. City Manager Randy Humphrey said a previous owner had also requested the paving of the road section but had withdrawn the request when the cost of the project became known.

The paving project would be financed by an assessment of property owners along the road.

City Commissioners also set June 23 at 7:50 p.m. as the time for a public hearing regarding the establishment of property at 810 W. State St. as an Industrial Development District.

If the district is established, property owner Harold Lundy could file for an Industrial Facilities Exemption on new structures and personal property. The exemption would allow payment of one-half the normal property tax on the new industry for a period of 12 years.

Lundy is reportedly negotiating with an industry interested in locating on the property but has declined to disclose the specific industry at this time.

The Lundy property adjoins Sealed Power property that is already established as an Industrial Development District.

City Commissioners also referred to the Planning Commission a request by Dwight and Gail Sheperd, owners of a property at 209 Sicksie, that the property be rezoned from low density residential to medium density residential.

The Sheperds propose building a duplex on the site, said a memo to city commissioners from Zoning Administrator Diane Edwards.

The site adjoins property on the same block that is currently medium density residential.

Jam and jelly

Dawn Harris

Clinton County has an abundance of fresh fruit growing in its soil. Whether its strawberries, raspberries or blueberries, make sure the jams and jellies you produce turn out to perfection.

Follow the directions in a reliable food preservation book (or in commercial pectin brochures) and remember these extra pointers:

- Although liquid and powdered fruit pectins give equally easy and successful results, they are not interchangeable in recipes; follow exactly the recipes given in each package and do not try to substitute one for another.
- Sterilize your jars. The USDA recommends that you sterilize your jars anytime you are preserving food in a processing time of 15 minutes or less.
- Follow the instructions carefully. If the recipes say to "boil hard for one minute," time it by the clock.
- Measure the ingredients carefully. Remember — fruit, pectin, acid, and sugar all have to be present in the right amounts for jelly or jam to "set up."
- Never cut down on the amount of sugar that a recipe calls for. It takes a lot of sugar for a gel to be formed. If you use less, you'll wind up with syrup — great for ice cream or pancakes, not so good for toast or sandwiches! There is also danger of spoilage when the sugar has been reduced.

• Never double a recipe. If a double batch of jelly or jam is cooked for the usual time, it will be undercooked — which means the jelly or jam will be soft and runny. If boiled longer, it will have caramelized flavor and dark color. You'll have better success by preparing the recipe twice and preparing the fruit for each just before use.

If you have further questions about making jams or jellies call the Cooperative Extension Office at 224-3288 between 8 a.m. to noon or 1 to 5 p.m.

Dawn Harris is the home economist for the Clinton County Cooperative Extension Service.

Barrett and Linda Blaylock

Blaylock-Cassidy

Reside in Newfoundland

Linda May Cassidy became the bride of Barrett Lee Blaylock at a double-ring ceremony on March 22 at the U.S. Naval Facility Chapel in Argentia, Newfoundland, Canada.

The bride is the daughter of Mary Cassidy of Fredeucton, NB. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Blaylock, 5083 Francis Road, St. Johns.

Captain Bunce performed the ceremony before 70 friends and relatives of the couple. The altar was decorated with blue carnations and white mums, and the song "Evergreen" was chosen by the couple as wedding music.

For her wedding, the bride chose a Victorian style gown of white satin with an overlay of lace on the bodice and skirt. It was accented with lace and pearl trim. The skirt was gathered at the bottom, attached with lace and pearl inserts.

Her finger-tip veil of illusion lace was attached to a headpiece adorned with lace and pearls. She carried a cascading arrangement of blue and white silk roses.

Serving as maid of honor was Diane David from Argentia, Newfoundland. Bridesmaids were Susan Thompson and Lori Luke. They wore long-sleeved, royal blue dresses with a draped neckline. They carried silk arrangements of blue carnations and mums.

Best man was Mike States of Argentia, Newfoundland, and groomsmen were Charles Patterson and Gwyn Blaylock.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the Officers Club with Lynn Scott and Davie Lansing assisting at the reception.

Special guests of the couple were Cindy Cassidy and Mary Cassidy, sister and mother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Blaylock, Alayne and Gwyn Blaylock parents and brother and sister of the groom.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Blaylock are making their home in Argentia, Newfoundland, Canada.

Racing beds take over the Southpoint Mall

By RHONDA GAFFNEY
Staffwriter

The fourth annual Southpoint Mall Bed Race was run before an enthusiastic crowd in the mall parking lot last Saturday. The Toledo Commutators pulled off their third consecutive first place finish in the modified division and Dancers Fashions took first in the hospital bed division.

Members of the Dancers Fashions were Kym Deak, Tim Deak, Paul Surdenik and Russ Rademacher.

Other beds were entered by Hazel I. Findlay, Knights of Columbus, Cinema 3, A.C.O., Fishers Big Wheel, Little Caesars, and Franderson Management.

Ten brightly decorated "beds" were entered in the race, which was sponsored by the Southpoint Mall Merchants Association. All proceeds went to the Hazel I. Findlay Country Manor in St. Johns.

"In the past, the winning team has designated what charity or organization they want the money to go to," said Lori Vasquez, co-organizer of the event and manager of Dancers Fashions. "However, this year, the merchant association decided prior to the race that Hazel I. would be the benefactor. They have entered a bed in the race each year and have always been very supportive."

Dave Weiner, manager of Cinema 3 Theatres in the Southpoint Mall, was, along with Vasquez, the co-chairperson of the race. Besides the race, activities for the day included a pancake breakfast by the St. Johns Knights of Columbus and pre-race parade.

"All the participants have a really good time and it's all for a good cause," Vasquez said.

Although the race is run "just for fun," the final heat of the modified division between the Commutators and the Feldpausch team from Fowler was a real squeaker. The Owosso-based Commutators edged out Feldpauschs by a fraction of a second, 5.65 to 5.70 on the 40 yard course.

There is an on-going rivalry between the two groups. "We beat them (Owosso) last year on a 120 yard course at the Most Holy Trinity Parish Festival," said Fowler's bed-builder Claude Feldpausch. "We'll be looking for a rematch with them when they come there on August 10."

The Commutators said they would be "ready." Harold Hoenschell built their bed four years ago, and they have a winning record with it, participating in numerous bed races around the state.

"We have a good team and each race is a lot of fun," Hoenschell said. "We took second place at the Curwood Festival in Owosso already this year and will be competing in about seven other races also."

Savings and Loan changes name: Capital Federal Bank

Capitol Federal Savings and Loan Association has announced its name change to Capital Federal Savings Bank. The new name received final approval from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board on June 1. The association received consent from its 55,000 customers earlier this year. "In its 96 year history, Capitol Federal has adapted as necessary to keep pace with the changing marketplace," said R.E. Clark, Association President. "This new name more accurately reflects the complete banking services now available from us. The only change will be in our name — the structure and strong local attachment to the people of mid-Michigan will continue as always."

Capitol Federal will continue to be a member of the FHLB system and insured by the FSLIC. It is the area's largest Lansing-based financial institution with assets of $473 million, serving mid-Michigan from 11 office locations. In St. Johns, the institution is located at 301 N. Clinton Ave.

D. Rogers transfers to Lansing

Capital Federal Savings has named David P. Rogers, who has been the branch manager of the St. Johns office, its local officer at its main office in Lansing.

Ken Kralik has been named the new branch manager. More details about the new manager will be announced at a later date. While managing the St.

Financial focus Safety vs. income

By Chuck Dicken

Regardless of what security we select, it should meet our goals. One of the basic tenets of investing is that it should not be done on impulse. Know what you want before you buy. Then, determine if your selection will do for you what you want — in short, if it will meet your needs.

If, for example, you want your investment to give you income, then you must expect your choice to provide suitable dividends (stocks or equity investments provide dividends) or interest (bonds or debt securities produce interest) to meet your needs. In addition, you must be reasonably convinced that this income will be paid to you regularly and on time.

Whether or not you get your income will depend on the ability of that particular corporation to meet its obligations. It is also generally true that the higher your yield or return, the more risk you assume. A U.S. government-guaranteed bond will not provide as much income as an unsecured note of some small corporation. On the other hand, the government bond will afford you more safety and peace of mind. So, if you're aiming for maximum income on your investment, chances are you're going to have to sacrifice a bit or safety. To put it another way, "There's no such thing as a free lunch."

If, on the other hand, income is secondary and you're after capital appreciation, then you probably should invest in securities you think you may sell for more than you paid for them.

One thing you can be certain of, however, is that no stock or bond can simultaneously offer both minimum risk, attractive income and tremendous growth potential. If a security features one of these attributes, the others will be secondary or non-existent. At certain times, however, it may be possible to obtain securities which potentially offer some modest combination of these features over a period of time.

Investment term of the week: BOND — Basically, a bond is an IOU or promissory note of a corporation, usually issued in multiples of $1,000 or $5,000. In every case, a bond represents debt — a bondholder is a creditor of the corporation. In most cases, bonds are secured by a mortgage. Chuck Dicken lives on Oakland Street in St. Johns. He is a registered representative of Edward D. Jones.

Busch Clash at Crystal Raceway very successful

By NOELLE GABLE
Fulton High School

The Busch Series made its yearly appearance at Crystal Raceway on June 18. Forty late model racers signed in for the evening's events with local and top names from tracks across the state.

Frank Seder of Alger won the A-Feature racing ahead of the pack after taking the lead when Jeff Finley of Lansing lost it with mechanical difficulties which forced him over the top of the track between the third and fourth turns.

Bob Kingen of West Branch finished second and Eric Chant of St. Johns took third. Fourth and fifth went to Dick Shively and Gene Playter. Drivers two through ten drove extremely strong races, often in a pack two-abreast, lap after lap.

The B-Feature was won by Joe Dorer of Portland. Most of the drivers had to use quick thinking, reflexes, and skill to avoid Tom Williams as he spun in the middle of turn two.

Seder won the Australian Pursuit race. Heat winners were Jim Kohn, Ken Love, Johnny Roberts, and Marty Buffum. The winner of the fast car dash was Kris Patterson who had the fastest time of 16.57 (82 mph).

The pro stock feature drivers ran a great race. A yellow caution flag was brought out once for metal on the track, put away, and never seen again in that race.

Gene Carson worked his way up to first place from the fifth position, and held on to take the checkered flag.

The first pro stock heat was taken by Delbert Brigner and the second by Carson after he drove around Troy VanderVeen who had done a head-first flip over turn two.

Junior fan club winners for the night were Jenny Bottom of St. Johns who rode with her father Jon Bottom, and Chris Wilson of Lansing riding with Chris Patterson.

Coming events at Crystal include the Carman Wheel Special (late model season championship) on June 28; Spirt of '76 late model invitational on July 3 which will feature a fireworks display; and the pro stock mid-season championship on July 5.

Redwing campers enjoy talk by former CMU b-ball coach

By RHONDA GAFFNEY
Sports Editor

Participants at the St. Johns Redwing Basketball Camp last week had a special treat when Ted Kjolhede Sr., father of Redwing football Coach Bart Kjolhede, spoke to both groups of campers on the basics of basketball.

"You don't learn about basketball by sitting around — you learn by playing the game," the 16-year-veteran coach and former Athletic Director at Central Michigan University said. "First, there is explanation, then, demonstration, and finally, execution."

The senior Kjolhede, now retired, "knows a lot about basketball," Coach Kjolhede said in introducing his father to the 100-plus campers on the final day of St.

"You can't sit up, watch the idiot tube, and drink pop and become a good basketball player."

Johns' camp. In addition to his years at CMU, Kjolhede coached at high schools in Grand Haven and Battle Creek.

"Learning basketball skills is similar to learning to play the piano," the coach said, "by repetition. That's why the coaches here have you doing drills over and over. There is a certain way to position yourself, a certain way to hand the ball off, a certain way to pass off. You must learn to do each one correctly."

THE COACH SAID that eating habits today could be a big problem that the future basketball stars would have to overcome.

"You have to eat like Olympic athletes," he said. "Not so much pizza, cookies, soda, french fries and potato chips — instead try a lot of milk, juices, fruits, lean meats and fish, and salads. Sweet stuff and salt is just not good."

He also stressed the importance of getting the proper amount of rest each day.

"You have to go to bed and get nine or 10 hours sleep each night. You can't sit up, watch the idiot tube, and drink pop and become a good basketball player."

The coach ended his talk with four final points which he said were vital for each camper to attain if they wanted to be better than average players.

"Play with pride — try everyday to get better at the sport; Play with guts — play fair, but play to win; Play unselfishly — pass the basketball, assists can be just as important as scoring; and, Play fair — never cheat."

REDWING VARSITY basketball Coach Keith Haske said that the two-week camp had been "successful", with an average of 120 campers attending the first week and 100-plus the second.

"I think all the campers enjoyed the talk that Coach Kjolhede gave," Haske said.

Assisting Coach Haske in the daily drills and scrimmages at the high school for grades 7-12 were Coaches Dirk Besko, St. Johns junior varsity coach, and Kjolhede, who coaches the freshman basketball squad as well as the varsity football team.

Instructors at the junior high for grades 2-6 were Coaches Beth Swears and Dick Blink. Also helping at both the high school and junior high were former Redwing players Tod Rohrbach, Mike Ludwick, Marty Martens, Jeff Casler, John Archambault and Dave Clause.

"We have been very pleased with both the turn-out for the camp and with the attitude of the campers," Coach Haske said. "Hopefully, they have learned things to help them become smarter ball players."

St. Johns City rec program shows growth over years

By RHONDA GAFFNEY
Sports Editor

St. Johns City recreation programs have come a long way since they were begun in 1971. That first year saw four teams with 60 players participating in the City's softball league. In the summer of 1986, a total of 28 mens teams and 13 womens softball teams compete each week from mid-June through August on two fields at the St. Johns City Park. The City also sponsors a T-ball program for children aged six and seven, Junior Lassie league and Lassie league softball program for girls aged 8-10 and 10-14, recreational tennis league, and a swim program and lessons with help from the YMCA. "There are not as many youth participating in the T-ball and Lassie league programs as in past years," said Diane Edwards, Administrative Assistant for Recreation, "but we do have more adult softball teams playing this year than last year. Most of those figures have held steady for the past four or five years."

A total of 41 mens and womens softball teams took part in the city rec program in 1980, with the number increasing to 49 in 1982, and peaking in 1983 when a total of 57 teams played in St. Johns. The number of teams fell to a low of 37 last year before coming back to the 41 mark this season.

The T-ball program runs each Thursday morning at the park, with three boys and three girls teams taking part this year. Lassie league and junior lassie league play their games on Tuesdays, also at the City Park. There are four junior lassie league teams and three lassie league teams participating in 1986. Coaches for all teams are volunteers.

Recreational Supervisor Jeff Casler is responsible for getting the fields ready for play each day, coordinating umpires for games, and determining rain-outs. He is assisted this year by Scott Palmer.

"We are currently making plans for a number of additional summer activities for youth in the area," Edwards said. "There is a possibility that we may host a bike rodeo, arts and crafts day, and track and field day in the near future."

Persons interested in finding out more about City recreational activities should call 224-8944.

Sports briefs

In last week's story on Chris Ebert receiving All-American status in gymnastics at St. Johns High School, Coach Sue Cerny was inaccurately quoted as saying that Ebert was the first gymnast so honored at St. Johns.

What Coach Cerny said was that Ebert was the "first female gymnast to receive an All-American certificate at St. Johns High School."

Bart Ancino, Redwing standout in 1979 and 1980, was the first St. Johns student to receive the award, earning seven certificates. Teammate Calvin Rice, also was awarded an All-American certificate for vaulting in 1980.

We apologize for the error.

Charity football in Bath

Cardinals win first three

When the United States Football League began summer play in 1983, it was seen as something new and unique. But Bath has had a summer football team going on seven years now.

It's the Bath Cardinals, a Michigan Charities Football League team that calls Bath High School its home field, and earns money for the Bath Athletic Boosters.

The team members are college-age guys who really want to play football — they have to pay a $65 fee to be on the team, and don't make a cent. All proceeds from ticket sales and concessions go directly to the booster club.

Dick Dragosek is the team's head coach, and he has led the team so far this year to a 3-0 record. He works them hard, starting practice five weeks before the season starts, and keeping up practice two days a week during the season. Last year the Cardinals earned a 4-4 record.

The team's next home game is this Saturday, June 28 at the Bath High School field. Kickoff time is 7 p.m., and tickets are $2 apiece.

In the Cardinal's last contest, they smeared Cadillac 47-0 June 14 at Cadillac. First-string quarterback Greg McKay led off with two touchdown passes to Marvin Spaay in the first quarter, for 38 and 40 yards. McKay completed four of six for a total of 118 yards.

Ray Prince replaced McKay early in the second quarter, and he threw three touchdown passes, completing five out of six for 92 yards. He connected with Bob Anderson and Terry Strauss for the scoring plays.

A 10-yard bootleg by Andre Benjamin and a one-yard sprint by Jim Latunski were proof that the work the Cardinals have been putting into their running game is paying off.

In the team's first game of the season, it polished off the Tri-City Mariners 16-9 June 7.

Last year, the Cardinals made it to the playoffs but lost to the Lansing Crusaders 6-0. This year they're aiming to win a rematch.

Rain problems

Giles Roehl

Besides the drowned out spots, the extra washing in the fields, and delayed field work, one additional problem may result from the heavy rains.

With the heavy rain, significant amounts of nitrogen may have been lost from soils by leaching and/or denitrification. The amount of nitrate movement downward in the soil profile will depend on the water moving through. For each inch of excess water, and we've had some, that moves through the soil profile, nitrate will move three inches on fine texture soils, six inches on sandy soils and somewhere in between on organic soils, depending on the exact soil composition.

In the soil that remained saturated, the nitrate loss will be greater. Well drained fields, either by tile or naturally, will experience less loss. Aerate soils with a cultivator or rotary hoe as soon as possible or minimize prolonged loss through denitrification.

Where leaching or saturated soil conditions have occurred, growers should sidedress 30 pounds actual nitrogen per acre. Foliar applications with six to eight pounds urea may also provide a short term benefit. Do not use ammonium nitrate for foliar, as foliage burn will occur.

WHITE PLANTS Have you seen the white plants along the roads, corn fields, etc. This is the result of spray drift from a new agricultural chemical called Command, causing the chlorophyll to leave the plant leaves.

Reports of Command injury 200 yards or greater from the site of application are common. Some reports indicate injury as far as one mile. Off target movement of Command can occur from two sources; spray particle drift or volatilization of the chemical from the soil surface. Volatilization is probably responsible for most of the apparent injury in Michigan. This volatilization can occur for as long as two weeks after application.

Plants vary in their sensitivity to Command and unfortunately some of the most sensitive plants are desirable plants such as fruit trees and many ornamentals. Symptoms have also been found on alfalfa and small grain. Use Command with caution in these areas. Where off-target injury has occurred, the plants should be monitored closely for the next two or three weeks. Only time will tell to what extent permanent damage, if any, has occurred. However, previous experience suggests that in most situations, the plant will recover in about two weeks with no long term effects.

Two local women are elected officers of cattle group

Glenda Braman of Ashley and Ruth Stevenson of St. Johns were elected president and membership chairperson for the National Shorthorn Lassies recently.

Braman has been a Lassie for 26 years and was recognized by the national auxiliary as a Lassie of the Year in 1982. She and her husband, Dick, have three children and several grandchildren, and own and operate "Just-A-Few-Farms" with over 100 dual purpose cows.

She is employed in the data processing department of Gratiot Community Hospital and keeps books for Braman Oil Company and the farm.

Stevenson has served as president of the Michigan

Shorthorn Lassies for the past two years. An elementary school teacher for 16 years, she and her husband, Bob, have two children and own the W Bar herd of 20 female shorthorns. W Bar was begun in 1975.

The Corner Garden I love fresh fruits and vegetables. Unlike my Aunt Metha, I don't want the worms to look out for themselves! I just don't want them. Therefore, I use chemicals to control insects, diseases and, in some cases, weeds. However, if your garden has been hit by either a known or unknown, but definitely unwanted spray, now what do you do? The answer to this question is not clear cut, nor is it easy. Much depends on the chemical that was used and/or the stage of growth of the plants that were hit.

Most chemical labels contain a pre-harvest, re-entry or other precautionary statement concerning the use of that particular chemical. Always look for these statements before applying a pesticide and when it is suspected that the chemical may have been used in error. However, if the label does not carry a warning or is not specific then use the following guidelines.

During the vegetative growth period of a plant, that period when it is adding leaves, and stems to the bulk, remember the following.

If it's a plant of which you eat the leaves, such as lettuce or spinach, and the plant survives, cut off the infected parts and throw them away. The regrowth should not be affected.

If it is a plant like a tomato of which we eat the fruit and it is not killed, nor has it started to set fruit, allow the plant to grow. The fruit it sets should be good.

During the reproduction stage, such as when strawberries, tomatoes, eggplant etc., are being set, remember the plant is putting all of its resources into the reproduction part. The concentration of any chemical will be much greater in that part. It probably would be a good idea to not use such fruits.

Another good rule is, if in doubt, don't! No fruit or vegetable is worth a chance of becoming sick.

Have you tried BT yet? Bacillus Thuringiensis is a non-chemical pesticide used to control various worms such as found in cabbages, cauliflower and broccoli. Available under several different trade names, I find it does the job without the use of chemicals. However, one still needs to use caution!

Put July 14, Crops Field Trip on your calendar now! A special workshop for Christmas tree growers has been scheduled in Ingham County. The workshop will include pruning for best results and weed control in your plantation. Call the Extension Office at 224-3288 to get your name on the mailing list.

County election of pork delegates is July 7 to 11 at Extension office

Area pork producers will have the opportunity to participate in a U.S. Department of Agriculture sponsored statewide election to select individuals for appointment to an industry-wide body administering promotion, research and consumer information for pork.

The voting in Clinton County will take place on July 7-11 at the Extension Office, 306 Elm Street, St. Johns, from 8-12 noon and 1-5 p.m. Candidates receiving the highest number of votes in each state will be eligible for appointment by the Secretary of Agriculture to the state's allotted positions on the National Pork Producers Delegate Body.

The delegate body, consisting of 165 producers, including two or more members representing each state and four importers, will be responsible for administering all aspects of the pork order.

An absentee voting packet containing a ballot and registration form may be obtained from Jim Epstein, National Pork Producers Election, PO Box 23762, Washington D.C. 20026-3736; phone (202)475-5407. Absentee ballots must be postmarked by July 11 and received at the above address no later than July 18.

Votes will be tallied at 9 a.m. on July 15 at the local county office of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. The public is invited to the official counting. The results will be forwarded to the Secretary for consideration.

State milk production up three percent despite dairy herd termination program

State milk production up three percent despite dairy herd termination program

Dairy herds in Michigan produced 499 million pounds of milk during May, up three percent from a year earlier, according to the Federal/State Michigan Agricultural Statistics Service.

Milk cow numbers averaged 385,000 head, down 7,000 from one year ago. Herd expansion has offset part of the decline in milk cow numbers due to the Dairy Termination Program. Increased milk per cow is keeping total milk production above previous year levels. Milk per cow averaged 1,295 pounds, up 55 pounds from May, 1985. The value of milk sold in Michigan averaged $12 per hundredweight (cwt.) during May, down 60 cents from one year earlier. This price reflects the total value of milk at the dairy plant or receiving station before deductions are made.

Hay baling

Marilyn Loudenslager

The wet weather we have had lately has resulted in many acres of hay being put up in large round bales. This is a way to get hay harvested quickly, before it gets wet. However, bales of this type do present several problems.

To the dairy producer, feeding large bales can be a problem. There is no readily available or inexpensive system to control hay intake when feeding lactating dairy cows. A second major concern is the storage and feeding losses normally associated with large round bales. Previous studies have shown losses of 50-55 percent for large round bales stored outside without cover.

Researchers at the University of Missouri harvested alfalfa in large round bales and stored these bales by several methods. Hay was stored outside without cover, stacked two or three high and covered with plastic or stored inside a hay barn. As shown below, hay stored outside and uncovered resulted in 15 percent storage loss and 25 percent feeding loss. Hay stored outside but covered, exhibited a six percent storage loss and a 14 percent feeding loss. Total losses for hay uncovered and outside were 40 percent as compared to 20 percent for alfalfa hay stacked and stored under plastic cover and 15 percent for barn stored hay.

Storage, feeding losses of large round bales:

Outside, uncovered: 15 percent storage loss, 25 percent feeding loss, 40 percent total loss.

Outside, stacked, covered: 6 percent storage loss, 14 percent feeding loss, 20 percent total loss.

Inside barn: 3 percent storage loss, 12 percent feeding loss, 15 percent total loss.

The alfalfa hay stored by the various methods was fed to dairy heifers. Intake was lowest for hay stored outside without cover. Dry forage intake (pound/100 pound body weight) was 2.1 pound for large round bales stored without cover, 2.3 pound for hay stored under plastic and 2.4 pound for alfalfa hay stored within the barn. The Missouri researchers pointed out that deteriorated hay and low quality resulted in low intake of alfalfa hay stored outside without cover.

Upon examining the economics of hay storage methods, the researchers stated that plastic covering should be considered marginally feasible unless reused several times or hay value increases beyond the $70 price used in their calculations. It was reported that reduced losses with barn stored alfalfa hay could be expected to cover barn building expense, including interest, in five to six years.

Marilyn Loudenslager is the agriculture agent for the Clinton County Cooperative Extension Service.
