Back Yard Composting	Often the best way to manage yard wastes is through back yard composting. When residents properly manage materials on their own property, it provides a variety of economic and environmental benefits. It uses less resources than bagging and placing at the curb or taking to a local collection site, avoids fuel use and pollution from collection trucks, and creates a valuable soil amendment for use on the lawn or in the garden.	The Clinton County Department of Waste Management can help residents establish back yard compost bins. There are also a number of resources the posted on the Department's web pages, in the same location in which this file was downloaded, to help residents get started to backyard compost.
